

THE OMAHA MORNING BEE

Fight Looms as Congress Opens Today

Key to Situation Still Held by Insurgents—May Undertake Reprisals for Regulators' Action.

Farm Measures Assured

Washington, Nov. 30.—With the breach between the regular and insurgent republican organizations still further widened, the 68th congress, which already has established a record as the most turbulent in the nation's history, will reconvene tomorrow for its short and final session.

In the three months intervening before March 4, efforts will be made to put through some important general legislation in addition to the annual appropriation bills, but with little apparent prospect of success.

The key to the whole situation still is held by the insurgents, whose recognized leader, Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, and his three chief supporters in the senate, have been read out of the party councils by senate republicans.

Fight Will Be Pressed.

One thing is certain, the last chapter on this subject has not yet been written. Senators who have disassociated with this action of their republican colleagues intend to express their views when the senate is called upon to act on the report of the republican committee on committees covering the new assignments to standing committees to fill vacancies caused by the death of several senators during the last six months.

Leaders of the house republicans have no present intention of following the lead of the senate organization by reading out of their councils Representative John M. Nelson of Wisconsin and others who supported Senator La Follette in his campaign as the independent candidate for the presidency.

Opening Session to Be Brief.

The opening sessions tomorrow of both the house and senate will be brief. New members elected or appointed to succeed those who have died since last May, will be sworn in and committees will be named to inform the president that the congress is ready to receive communications from him. Then resolutions will be adopted on the death of members and immediate adjournment will be taken out of respect to their memories.

There will be little activity in either house until after receipt of President Coolidge's second annual message, which, under present plans, will be transmitted by messenger on Wednesday and read in the house and senate by their respective clerks.

Early attention will be given by the house to the annual supply measures, the first of which, that for the Interior department, probably will be reported out Tuesday. The appropriations committee has the work on a number of others well under way and Chairman Madden hopes to get them all out before the first of the new year.

Agreed On Need of Farm Aid.

While the house is thus engaged, the senate, under plans of the majority leaders, will take up such general legislation as the steering committee shall deem of the first importance. Admittedly, however, this plan is purely tentative and might easily be altered if the democrats and insurgents desire to do so.

Farm aid legislation is one thing that leaders in both houses are anxious to put through, but early action is not in prospect as congress probably will desire to await the report of the farm commission appointed by

Germany to Pick New Reichstag; Interest Flags

Ballot Total Expected to Fall Far Short of Record Set Last May—No Dominant Issue.

By Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 30.—Germany next Sunday will elect a new reichstag. While the eight major parties and the nonpartisan and unattached groups have qualified for entry on the official ballot, the campaign thus far has wholly failed to evoke the same measure of popular interest that brought out 29,000,000 votes last May. The political leaders anticipated that there will be a falling off of several million votes next Sunday, as compared with the balloting last May, and a reduction of the number of deputies in the new reichstag by at least 30, as the proportional system of voting allots one mandate to every 50,000 votes.

No Lively Struggle.

The prevailing inertia is largely born of popular disgust with German party politics and incompetent reichstagers, and, whereas, the Dawes plan was the cardinal issue in the May elections, the present campaign has wholly failed to produce a slogan calculated to rouse the voters out of their lethargy. The three liberal parties—socialists, clericals and democrats—are making the issue one of democratic principles by appealing to the voters to stand by the republic and the Weimar constitution. They also are making an effective bid for votes on the plea that the government's course in accepting the London agreement has been amply vindicated by the progressive improvement in the nation's economies since September 1, and that any deviation from present policies, both with respect to the government's internal and foreign program, not only would incur a recrudescence of economic convulsions, but constitute a faith with respect to Germany's reparations obligations as dictated by the London agreement.

Back Up Dawes' Plan.

The heavy gains in mandates scored by the nationalists and communists last May, and the advent in the reichstag of General Ludendorff's fascist party with 30 deputies, primarily were the result of the widespread social unrest growing out of the era of inflation. As these parties prospered in fishing in troubled waters, their prospect of maintaining their present number of seats in the reichstag has measurably depreciated through the advent in Germany of sound currency and the resultant benefits of a visible betterment in social and economic conditions.

The process of illuminating voters and urging them to "back up" the Dawes plan, also has liberally benefited through the steady flow of American loans and credits which, despite occasional caustic references as to rates of interest charged by the American bankers, has definitely impressed the popular mind in Germany with the sincerity of the American desire and determination to back up the Dawes plan in a practical manner.

Pictures Sent Over Wireless

Uncanny Invention Transmits Photographs Across Ocean, While Interested Group Witnesses Process.

By LOUIS W. FEHR, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 30.—In a crowded room at No. 64 Broad street, experts of the Radio Corporation of America today gave a public demonstration of the art of receiving pictures across the Atlantic ocean.

It was almost uncanny to see a fountain pen pluck from the air and record on a cylinder no bigger than a baking powder can the features of famous faces selected in Marconi House, London. The new wonder was only a few days old. The first picture to come across the Atlantic by wireless was that of President Coolidge received Friday. It had been closely followed by that of Secretary of State Hughes. The busy little machine, sitting on a desk scarcely larger than a tea table, seemed too good to be true. Could it really be a fact that from London 4,000 miles away, were being sent the lineaments of United States Ambassador Kellogg taking form right under the eyes of a score of eager watchers? The receiving instrument seemed like a printing press, as unromantic as a sewing machine.

Two Pictures at Once.

Then the machine stopped while a half message interrupted the half finished picture of another man, prohibition wirelessly from London, men watching the pictures being sent from Marconi House, London, followed by a question as to the results in New York, brought the realization that the marvel was genuine. It brought to the latent group watching the pen tracing the growing picture a vision of another man, similar group in far-off London, observing the picture being sent. Methodically, the little machine revolved and turned, the pen moved from side to side and up and down, and in a brief quarter of an hour, an unmistakable likeness of Ambassador Kellogg was apparent. Meanwhile on a concealed cylinder, rays of light had impressed another portrait on a sensitive photographic film, making two pictures received in one transmission.

Many Possibilities.

In quick succession, there followed portraits of Owen D. Young, Dawes commission expert, Doveser Queen Alexandra of England, the prince of Wales and Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, as well as photographs of the finish of a relay race, and the raising of a sunken steamer in the river Tees. Gen. J. G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, declared that under favorable conditions a picture could be sent in six minutes instead of 20 or more. When the first picture was sent between the two cities, the machine received in one transmission. In quick succession, there followed portraits of Owen D. Arrested in Blackmail of Prince

Mrs. Maude Robinson.

London—Charles Robinson and his pretty blonde wife, Maude, were vindicated Friday by a jury of the charge of complicity in the blackmail of the mysterious eastern potentate, who was trapped with Mrs. Robinson in a Paris hotel.

Thus Mrs. Robinson's sworn statement that she became the eastern prince's mistress because she loved him, and Robinson's equally formal denial that he planned his wife's unfaithfulness for gain, were accepted as the truth by 10 men and two women who comprised the jury hearing the case.

The notorious trial came to an end, so far as public hearings are concerned, when the case went to the jury. Actual decision on the principal question involved—whether the Robinsons are entitled to recover about $600,000 of the $700,000 hush money paid by the potentate from the Midland bank, where the money was deposited and later withdrawn by the persons who engineered the blackmail plot—will not be made for 10 days or a fortnight. Meanwhile Lord Justice Darling will hear secret arguments by the opposing counsel without a jury.

He Surrenders $100,000

New York, Nov. 30.—Leo Kortez, wanted in Chicago in connection with alleged stock swindles totaling approximately $2,000,000, left here for Chicago this afternoon in company of two assistant state's attorneys of Illinois. The party left at 2:45 on the Broadway Limited of the Pennsylvania railroad. They arrived here this morning on the liner Coronaria from Halifax.

As the prisoner was being taken to the train, Alphonse F. Spiegel, attorney and representative of the Chicago Title and Trust company, announced that Kortez had surrendered about $100,000. During an interview with Spiegel he is said to have revealed the details of his financial operations in New York during the period following his disappearance from Chicago.

Came Voluntarily.

After preliminary formalities with the customs, immigration and public health authorities, Kortez was taken to a hotel for luncheon. Accompanying him were John A. Starbaro and Thomas Marshall, assistant state's attorneys of Illinois; Joseph Connelly, his attorney; Adrian L. Hoover of the Chicago Title and Trust company, and B. H. Scriven, provincial constable from Halifax, all of whom had boarded the ship with him at the Nova Scotia port.

The Illinois officials said that Kortez had boarded the ship voluntarily and that they had served a warrant on him as soon as the Coronaria entered American waters.

Spiegel boarded the vessel soon after it docked and had a long conversation with Kortez and his attorney, but neither he nor Kortez would talk to newspapermen, although the prisoner submitted to being photographed. Spiegel, it was said, was desirous that Kortez go to the offices of the American Bar association and submit to further questioning, but in the Chicago officials did not approve of the plan and hurried Kortez to an uptown hotel.

Surrenders Keys.

Representatives of the Chicago Title and Trust company are said to have questioned Kortez closely as to the disposition of funds which they believe he may have secreted here after leaving Chicago. The prisoner was ordered to have surrendered bank books, safe deposit box keys, and to have given information regarding his affairs in New York.

No further arrests took place yesterday. The 34 men who previously had been taken into custody were interrogated by the public prosecutor. A delegation of members of the chamber of deputies had protested to the prosecutor, and the liberal-constitutional party has published a manifesto protesting against arrests of members of the chamber.

By Associated Press.

London, Nov. 30.—The situation in Egypt is described as being "in good order" in dispatches to the foreign office today from Viscount Allenby, British high commissioner in Egypt. Official dispatches from the Sudan likewise report conditions "easier and satisfactory."

Nothing, however, yet indicates the origin of the Khartoum mutiny, which took several hours to suppress. By that time the building in which the mutineers took refuge, was in ruins from gunfire and the mutineers separated into small parties. Some of them escaped to the surrounding towns, while others were arrested by the soldiers.

The government is still of the opinion that it will not be necessary to employ force, but the steady reinforcement of British troops in Egypt continues. The first battalion of buffs embarked from Gibraltar for Egypt today.

Cairo advices indicate that the new government is devoting itself to the preservation of peace, and that no reports of new incidents in the Sudan have reached Cairo.

Husband Put Stuff in Her Tea

Confessed Slayer Alleges That "Other Woman" Gave Him Tablets for Purpose—She Is Arrested.

Both Concede Intimacy

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee. Broken Bow, Neb., Nov. 30.—Infatuation for another woman which could not brook the delay of the divorce court, may lead Frank Bruner, 47, roundhouse foreman of Sargent, Neb., to the death house of the Nebraska penitentiary.

Tonight Bruner, who has been in jail here since Friday, confessed that he poisoned his wife, and named Aroesta Northy, 47, of Sargent, as his accomplice.

The confession came after two days of questioning, during which Bruner admitted his intimacy with Aroesta Northy, mother of four children, whose husband is 35 years her senior.

She Denies Charge.

In her cell here tonight, where she was placed after Bruner signed a statement admitting his guilt, she denied that she supplied the poison tablets which led to Mrs. Bruner's sudden death last Monday.

"Bruner told me he would get a divorce from his wife in the spring," she declared, "but I didn't have anything to do with poisoning her."

When only 20 Mrs. Northy, a tall and slender woman, married Aroesta Northy, then 58. For 25 years they lived together, to finally separate a year ago. A short time later the intimacy between her and Bruner developed to such an extent that tones were called, and the tale drifted at last to Mrs. Bruner. They quarrel bitterly, according to the county attorney's office, but Mrs. Bruner maintained her place in their home at Sargent.

Last September Bruner took an automobile trip of 21 days which led him through Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado. With him went Mrs. Northy.

"But it was an innocent trip with nothing wrong about it," Bruner naively told County Attorney Schaper. That "innocent trip," however, led to Bruner's arrest five days after his wife's mysterious death.

"Mercy poison," said the state chemist when asked to determine the cause of the death of Mrs. Bruner. From that time the case moved rapidly. Bruner was placed in jail Friday, Saturday he admitted his intimacy with Mrs. Northy and today he confessed.

Poison in Tea.

To the county attorney he related the details of his crime. Working closely with the police, he was home Monday when his wife was washing. At noon she stopped to prepare lunch for their four children and a cup of tea for herself. Into the cup Bruner slipped the poison tablets which, he says, were given him by Mrs. Northy.

A few minutes later Mrs. Bruner collapsed while handing up the dishes. Neighbors ran to assist her and a physician was called, but she was dead before assistance reached her.

First degree murder charges were filed against Bruner Friday. What charged will be filed against Mrs. Northy has not been indicated by County Attorney Schaper who filed a complaint against her as an accessory. With that complaint as his authority Sheriff Taylor this afternoon drove to Sargent and brought the woman to Broken Bow where, in her cell, she protests her innocence.
