SANTA CLAUS' greatest rivals as interesting personalities at this time of year are those who have most recently emerged from belief in his beneficence—the younger school set. For two exciting, busy weeks in the year, they reign supreme. Parents defer their own social plans to provide motors for the younger members of the family and give over billiard rooms and private dance floors to the more agile lot.

Misses Dorothy and Margaret Higgins are reunited with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Higgins and brother, Allen, for the holidays. Miss Dorothy attends Miss Spence's school in New York and her younger sister is a pupil at Brownell Hall. Miss Margaret was hostess at a dinner party Monday night at the Brandeis, and on Friday evening she entertained again very informally at her home. Parties fill their every day during these gay weeks.

Miss Lucile Uehling, who attends Mrs. Pratt's School of Individual Instruction, was hostess at a bridge luncheon of 10 tables December 23 at one of the first of the holiday parties. Miss Uehling is much interested in art, particularly in illustrating. She plans to attend Dobbs Ferry in New York next year and to specialize later, perhaps abroad, in her art work.

One of the most attractive of the younger girls is Miss Georgene Rasmussen, student at Central High school where she is known as an "A" student. She is a member of O. T. club. Her mother, Mrs. George Rasmussen is entertaining for her at one of the larger holiday parties, a pink tea on December 30. Assisting her will be Misses Charlotte Loomis, Mary Jane Sweet, Gertrude Marsh, Jane Bliss, Doris Cramer, Ruth Grimmel, Katherine Indoe, Marian Clarke, Betty Clarke and Dorothy Springer.

Miss Jane Bliss, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Rodney W. Bliss, is also a member of O. T. club at Central High school. She is talented musically and is devoting much of her time to study of piano. Miss Bliss will assist Miss Rasmussen at her tea on Tuesday.

Miss Ann Louise Pearsall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Pearsall is being honored by her sisters, Mrs. J. E. Goodrich, jr., and Miss Isabel Pearsall while she is home from Francis Shilper school, Mt. Carroll, Ill., where she is a freshman. Mrs. Goodrich will give a dinner Tuesday night at her home and Miss Isabel Pearsall will be hostess at a bridge luncheon on Wednesday for her sister. Miss Pearsall is literary editor of her school magazine.

Career - Home Combination Solved

By "GABBY."

FOUND, a woman who believed that the career-home combination can't be satisfactorily put together.

And, she is willing to give up the career, part of it, except insofar as it can be furthered without sacrifice to her two children, about whom she has "theories," believing that proper care for them cannot be purchased.

Mrs. Sidney J. Baker is the heroine of the story. Since the first of April she has marketed 52 stories to various publications. Thirty-nine of them have gone to a bankers' publication, "Getting On." They are short stories, with characters and plot. The magazine has a million circulation. It goes to large banks for their clientele. The First National bank of Omaha is one of the subscribers for 10,000 copies.

Oddly enough, "Getting On" is published by two uncles of Mrs. Herman Auerbach, who as Miss Ella Fleishman was recognized as one of Omaha's best newspaper writers, and who is now selling stories and plays to outside publications.

So well have the editors of "Getting On" liked Mrs. Baker's work that they offered her a position last week as assistant editor on their staff. It was tempting, of course.

"We could move to Chicago easily enough," said Mrs. Baker, "for Mr. Baker could do his work as well from there as from Omaha, but I have 'theories' about my children, and feel that at no price can I afford to leave them."

Maybe Mrs. Baker is writing into her own life a lesson on thrift in its truest sense.

AMONG the loveliest of parting gifts given Miss Eleonor Burley when she left Omaha Christmas night to sail today for Paris, was one from Mr. and Mrs. James E. Davidson, Mr. Davidson having been king when she was queen of Ak-Sar-Ben last year.

The gift was an unusual and most attractive leather purse with her gold monogram hanging from a dainty, matching cord.

And, thoughtful donors—the purse was just the size for the traveler's passport.

LIMOUSINES, diamonds, and furs were common enough as Christmas gifts in Omaha, not to be remarked.

A gift came from Germany, however, more unusual, perhaps more interesting.

Four wonderful Roller canaries were received from Leipzig, Germany, by H. W. Wendland. The birds have a great variety of rolls and tweets, all their notes being soft and sweet. They are a prize winning lot, their breeder in 1923 having received the Golden Medalion for the highest scoring bird.

These are the only birds of their kind in the city, with the exception of some owned by Fred Martin. They were ordered as Christmas presents one for each of Mr. Wendland's little nieces, Mary Irene and Jane Pulver, one for his son, Prentice, and the fourth for the children's grandmother, Mrs. C. M. Pulver.

THERE really isn't anything a pretty girl can't get away with, Gabby believes, since she hears that one Junior leaguer took a toy reindeer to her dentist for mending.

The dentist did it, and with the greatest care, and good will, replacing the leg on what was subsequently an unusual Christmas centerpiece at a smart dinner Tuesday evening.

Ruth Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gordon, will return to Cornell college and her brother, William, to Wentworth academy January 6.
