Wall Street buys and sells 2,000,000 shares a day now and nobody notices it. We quickly get used to prosperity. Brokers would consider a "million-share-day" an insult. But all money with which lambs gamble went to 5 1/2 per cent yesterday. A few days ago it was 2 1/2. Wall Street does not notice that it's rather sad to pay for gambling money as high an interest rate as merchants and manufacturers have to pay for legitimate business loans.

The real stock gambling will begin after the new year. Then look out for skyrocketing, to be followed by some falls that will make the speculators know just how flumpty Dumpty felt.

Senator Underwood, and others whose pure, innocent souls are above mere profit, might like to know something about the value of power shares and what it would mean to the General Electric company if kind Mr. Underwood should make the General Electric the private owner of Uncle Sam's plant at Muscle Shoals.

Take one little light and power investment made by the far-seeing B. F. His wife asked him to invest for her $10,000. He paid $9,300 for $10,000 par value of power bonds. They carried the right of exchange for common stock at par. He exchanged the $10,000 bonds for 100 shares of common stock. The company issued 10 shares of stock for one. The $10,000 investment could be sold yesterday for $69,500. You'll admit that properties going up like that are really too good for Uncle Sam to keep.

U. S. Airmen, Unable to Borrow Coats From Naval Officers, Driven From Cafe in French Indo-China

Told by LOWELL THOMAS
"We spent our first night in Saigon on board the United States destroyer Noah, which had been sent on ahead of us. In view of the grief we had so often had in taking off from inland rivers, we serviced up with only a light load of fuel. This meant that we must stop some where between Saigon and Bangkok."

"So another destroyer or was sent on ahead and we remained in the Paris of the east for an extra day, to allow the destroyer enough time to get into position. "We borrowed clothes from some of our naval friends and sallied forth to see the sights of Saigon," remarked Leigh Wade. "But this was the one and only place on the entire flight that we have reason to remember because of an unpleasant incident. All decked out in the immaculate white shirts and trousers that had been so generously lent to us by the boys on the destroyers, we jumped into rickshaws and started to 'do' Saigon."

Can't Eat Without Coat.
"The first feature of life in this Paris of the east that appealed to us was the sidewalk cafe. To some of us they brought back happy memories of Paris days and nights during the war. The first one we came looked so alluring that we stopped for refreshments. But after sitting there for a while at the little tables we became conscious of the fact that the waiters were taking care of everybody else but us. Moreover they were clearing at us in none too friendly way."

"Calling the head waiter, we started to tell him what we wanted, but he interrupted and said that they could not serve us and that was the reason for this, he said that no one without a coat could be served at the cafe. We fully appreciated that it was uncommon for Europeans to be without coats, but we tried to explain who we were and that as air service officers we could put on our naval colleagues' trousers and shirts and thus see the sights of Saigon, but that it was impossible for us to wear tunics and masquerade as members of another branch of the United States government service."

"All he said to this was that he knew all about who we were, but that it made no difference. We must beat it. "This inhospitably and frosty reception hardly increased our enthusiasm for Saigon and we voted the city a 'washout.' In fact, several of the boys had difficulty restraining themselves. To make the affair all the more unpleasant, the Frenchmen sitting around at the tables apparently relished our embarrassment and sided with the cafe management. "Strange Shopping Trip. "Despite the fact that we had lost our enthusiasm for Saigon and would have preferred to return to the destroyer, we were all in need of linen. So we started out to do a bit of shopping. 'Les' entered a tailor shop found a suit that fit him perfectly, and immediately wanted to buy it. But the tailor refused. Strange city, this Saigon! So 'Les' put down a $10 bill, which he knew by that time was more than white suits of that sort were worth, picked up the suit, and walked off down the street with it under his arm. For a block the tailor ran along behind him shrieking and howling. But he vanished in a hurry when 'Les' informed him that if he didn't hurry back to his tailor shop he wouldn't be able to buy any. Instead of stern wisecracks and Mississippi barges there were scores of sampans and here and there a Chinese junk with its crazy patch-work sail. "Midway to Bangkok we landed along side the destroyer sent out with gas and oil. Then at 4 p. m. we came down in the muddy river on which the capital of the Siamese is built, owing to the huge tree trunks, brush of all kinds, dead dogs and pigs, and debris of every description, that came floating down, it was all we could do to reach our moorings without crashing. Fortunately the officials of the Siamese government had stopped all traffic, because next to Shanghai there are more junks and steamers in the river at Bangkok than anywhere that we stopped in the far east. When we stepped ashore here we were in the land of the white elephant, one of the most fascinating spots we were to visit on our trip around the globe."

LAW FRATERNITY HEARS HASTINGS

The only way to govern a free man is to educate him, the only way to educate a man is to get him to think, said Judge William G. Hastings in a talk before the meeting of Phi Delta Phi honorary law fraternity Tuesday noon at the Hotel Fontenelle. More than 100 men gathered at the meeting.

Country Densely Populated

"Leaving Saigon, river, we flew over a densely-populated equatorial region of canals, jungle, paddy fields, and coconut plantations. We also passed countless pagodas, herds of water buffalo, and several fairly large towns with paved streets. Immediately after the cathedral spire and pagodas of Saigon dropped out of sight we reached the delta of one of the world's greatest rivers, the Mekong, which rises up on the plateau of central Asia.

SUSPECT IS HELD IN TRAM HOLDUP

Albert Murray, colored, 1216 Tenth avenue, Council Bluffs, was arrested in Omaha Tuesday by Detectives Donahue and Janda on suspicion that he was the bandit who held up a street car on the Fifth avenue line in Council Bluffs Monday evening and robbed the conductor and passengers of $25. Murray is said to answer the description of the bandit furnished to police by one of the passengers. The holdup occurred at Twenty-first street and Fifth avenue at 10 p. m.

All School Life Centered Around Students' Health

Lothrop Principal Pleads for Training Every Child in Right Living Habits.

Members of the school health section of the state teachers heard Miss Margaret K. O'Toole, principal of Lothrop school, discuss Tuesday afternoon the subject, "Every Child Should Be Educated and Trained in Right Habits."

"The public schools are doing a wonderful piece of work in health education today," was the speaker's foreword.

"Our eyes have been opened to the need of intensive health programs if we are to bring our children up to higher standards of health. We have learned that man's greatest asset is good health, which means a better and happier citizenry. We know that poor health is due to lack of care and ignorance of nature's laws, and that efficiency is the result of a sound mind in a sound body."

children where the curriculum does not include this instruction. "The health subject is important because it touches every part of the school. In teaching this subject we must impart enough scientific knowledge so that the child understands the basic principles of health. Teach him that he should choose to live right because disease and death follow wrong living habits. "Looking forward, we have an optimistic view of a race of superior men and women if children have been educated and trained in right living habits of health and hygiene. These habits will become fixed and will contribute to the physical and moral health and cleanliness of the race. This influence should carry over into future generations that will show this training in a people that are physically, morally and mentally able to do the world's work."
