ODELL VET DIES IN CALIFORNIA

Odell, Jan. 2.—The body of Alex Armstrong, 30, former resident of this place, ex-service man in the late world war, arrived here today from southern California, where he died following an operation for appen-dicitis five days ago, and burial was in the Odell cemetery New Year's day, five years since his return from the fields of France. He went to southern California a month ago for his health. When his case became serious the father and mother were called from Odell and were with him at the end. Joe, Charles and William Armstrong, farmers of Odell, are brothers, and Katie of Odell and Miss Bessie, a teacher in the Gilead schools, are sisters.

Columbus City Limit Uncertain; River Changes Course

Columbus, Jan. 2.—Where lies the real south boundary of the city? That's a question Columbus city council has referred to its judiciary com-mittee. The city fathers want the southern city limits to be the same from year to year. According to present records the north bank of the Loup river is designated as the boun-dary, but the river changes its course frequently. The city council has decided to find a boundary line that sticks.

Large doctor bills from stuffy bed-rooms grow.

MORE SNOW FALLS IN PLATTE VALLEY

Kearney, Jan. 2.—Kearney and sur-rounding country experienced an ad-ditional fall of snow, to the depth of about four inches, on New Year's night. During December more than two feet of snow fell in this portion of the Platte valley, it is estimated, and much of it is still in evidence. Movements of grain to market have been retarded and transport by road is still in a sorry way, even regular truck service having been virtually an-nulled during the entire month. Zero temperatures were experienced near-ly 20 days during the past month, 13 below being the lowest recorded.
