

Bills of Omaha's Sporting Rialto Listed by Tailor

Names of Athletes Appear in Petition for Bankruptcy Filed by Arnold M. Brower.

Tailor's bills of the sartorial star of Omaha's sporting rialto came to light Friday afternoon when the tailor, after vainly attempting to collect from his customers while he stayed off his creditors, went bankrupt.

Arnold M. Brower, proprietor of the Dundee Woolen Mills, 324 South Fifteenth street, filed a petition in bankruptcy Friday, listing assets of $12,042.45 and liabilities of $23,565.51. His assets include $2,037.15 due on accounts for clothes, most of them purchased by leading lights in the Omaha sports world.

A list of the customers who owe him for suits or other clothing includes Nick Cullop, star on the Burchard team; Dick Gillon, prize fighter; Steve Green, announcer of sporting events; Billy Fox, former manager of Baseball Headquarters, 475.

Most of Brower's debts are owing to eastern textile firms. Table Rock Theater, Bank Building and Garage Sold. Table Rock, Jan. 16.—Pending completion of a good title, the Ideal theater, the Community Bank building and the garage, erected at the same time and in connection with the Lincoln hotel here a few years ago, have been sold. M. B. Johnson, who has conducted a moving picture show in Table Rock for several years, becomes the owner of the theater for $4,000; the Community Bank building will become the property of Ed Hanna, who has conducted a grocery in Table Rock for several years, and the garage was bought by J. P. Morse, who has been running it for several months, at a consideration of $3,000. The bank building was sold for $3,300.

SUICIDE ENDS ILLICIT LOVE

We lived there Tuesday and Wednesday and then Thursday afternoon about 5 she left. I didn't see her again and didn't know where she had gone until I was told just now that she had tried to kill herself.

Ben Shaw is an itinerant barber and, according to the story which he told Pzanoski, he would always work part of the time which the two persons spent in various cities of the United States.

Mrs. Moon is a talented musician but never played for money while with Shaw, he said. Her income from the estate left by her father and a brother together with the income from the houses in Tacoma kept them most of the time.

Friend of Father.
Mr. Adams who is general counsel for the Bankers' Reserve Life Insurance company, said Friday that he had been an intimate friend of Mrs. Moon's father, Dr. Whinnery, and was appointed as the girl's guardian when she was 17 years old.

Later, he said, he was executor for the estate of her brother, who died in the Philippines. The young woman married Mr. Moon, a prominent business man of Tacoma, Wash., 10 years ago, Mr. Adams said. They separated three years later. She claimed that their temperaments were incompatible.

Warned by Y. W. C. A.
Mr. Adams said that he had doubted the woman's sanity for many months, and that he had contemplated asking that she be examined by the sanitary board.

She was a talented musician, he said, and had studied at eastern universities. Since her separation from her husband she had traveled widely throughout the United States.

Mr. Adams said that financial difficulties may have led her to attempt suicide. She had been left only small estates by her father and her brother.

Mrs. Moon has a brother, Norman Whinnery, living at 3121 Corby street.

Mrs. Whinnery said that Mrs. Moon had visited at their home Thursday afternoon and appeared normal. She was at a loss to explain her attempt at suicide, she said. She had never heard her speak of a man named Shaw.

Pzanoski said that he had been requested by relatives of the woman several days ago to arrest Shaw and break up the affair between him and Mrs. Moon. He had been unable to locate Shaw until Friday.

James Haney, 84, Dies. Fairbury, Jan. 16.—James Haney, 84, died Wednesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Thad Mendenhall. The body will be taken to Goodland, Kan., for funeral and burial Sunday.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

By THORNTON W. BURGESS
Who heads his appetite alone
Will for his greed some day atone.
—Bob White.

Ears, Eyes and Quick Wits.
Now, Bob White has not lived to bring up several families without learning what eyes and ears and wits are for. He and his family were nearly starved when they reached the shed in Farmer Brown's barnyard after the great storm. When they found grain scattered there it seemed almost too good to be true. How eagerly they picked up that grain, Bob White just as eagerly as his children.

But with all his eagerness and great hunger, Bob never forgot that, safe as they seemed there, an enemy might appear at any moment. He knew that the enemies always watch.

Cautiously Reddy poked his head around the corner of the shed.

ing and hunting for him had been made just as hungry by that great storm as he was, and that hunger would make them very bold. So as he picked up the grain he was every instant on the watch. His stomach was not more than half full when his sharp eyes saw a black nose cautiously poked around the end of the shed. Bob White didn't wait to see whose nose it was. He gave a signal, and with a whirl of stout wings all the Bob Whites flew out of that shed straight into the nearest tree.

Reddy Fox almost yelped with disappointment. He had so hoped to surprise these Bob Whites and catch at least one. He must get something to eat or he would starve. His keen ears caught the sound of a rustling in the straw in that shed. Perhaps one of those young Bob Whites had not heeded his father's warning. Cautiously Reddy poked his head around the corner of the shed. There was a big, gray rat. A moment later Reddy had his breakfast.

Over in the Old Orchard Mrs. Grouse was picking off apple buds as fast as she could. But Mrs. Grouse knew that that was a dangerous place. There were no leaves to hide her. She could be seen by any enemy who might come that way. So never for an instant did she forget to watch for danger. So it was that she saw the gray form of Terror the Goshawk, the enemy she feared more than any other, coming with the speed of the wind. She knew that it was useless to try to fly back to the Green Forest. Terror would catch her before she had much more than started. What, do you think she did? She plunged straight down from her perch into a big snowdrift, and there she worked her way farther and farther into it. With a scream of disappointment Terror the Goshawk flew away, to look elsewhere for his breakfast.

Over on the food shelves Tommy Tit the Chickadee, Yank Yank the Nuthatch, Drummer the Woodpecker and Sammy Jay were filling their stomachs as fast as they could. They felt fairly safe there so close to Farmer Brown's house. But they, too, knew that the great storm had made others quite as hungry as they were, and that there is nothing like hunger to make people bold. So, safe as they felt, they were continually on the watch.

It was Sammy Jay who saw the dreaded form of Hooty the Owl fall out from the top of Farmer Brown's barn. Instantly Sammy screamed, "Thief! Thief! Thief!" at the top of his lungs, and made straight for a cedar tree as fast as his wings could take him. The others didn't wait to see what the danger was. It was enough that Sammy had given warning. Each of them, took to his wings, and before Hooty could make up his mind all were safe.
