January a Favored Month for Founder Day Affairs

WHERE our ancestors of the immediately preceding generation stirred by New Year resolutions into founding organizations in the month of January? If for that or other reasons, it is true that many "Founders' day" celebrations occur this month.

The P. D. O. association gave a large luncheon this noon, honoring the day 25 years ago when their organization was founded at Mount Pleasant, Ia.

Kappa Alpha Theta sorority girls will celebrate their founders' day in a similar manner, luncheon at Hotel Fontenelle on Saturday, when 75 covers will be placed for the affair. They date back 55 years, 1870 having been the year when this sorority was organized.

College club members will observe their anniversary with a tea on Thursday of next week in the parlors of the First Methodist church. Their cards read "Eighteenth Anniversary Tea."

Friday Dances

The Qui Vive club will meet at the Blackstone for their bi-monthly dinner dance on Friday evening.

Mrs. H. R. Finley, wife of Captain Finley, and Mrs. C. A. Shepard, wife of Major Shepard, will be hostesses at the tea dance to be held at 7 Friday evening at the Fort Omaha Service club.

Shrine patrol and band will hold its regular semi-monthly dancing party Friday evening at Masonic temple. The patrol acts as a floor committee and the Shrine orchestra furnishes the music.

Faculty Woman's Club Entertains Students.

The annual party given for the girl students in the University of Nebraska Medical college will be held Wednesday of next week at Conklin hall on the campus, by the Faculty Woman's club. Mesdames J. P. Lord, W. F. Milroy, Alexander Young, E. W. Bridges and Alfred Schaeck will be in charge.

Guilfoyles in New Home.

Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Guilfoyle are occupying their new home at 3840 California street. Thirty-five of their friends surprised them with a house warming Saturday night. The guests brought their own supper and a Venetian mirror for the new home. Bridge and dancing were the entertainment of the evening.

Miss Barber Entertains.

Miss Helen Barber entertained a number of friends at her home Tuesday evening. Her guests were: Mesdames: Frank Hougulst, Donald Wilson, Bert Whitehead, Misses: Ruth Geiser, Marie Horn, Irene Parsons, Beate Blackert, Helen Grah, Mae Stinson, Mae Gieson, Irene Parsons.

Musical Tea.

Mrs. N. Wiseman entertained 19 guests at a musical tea on Wednesday at her home, honoring her sister-in-law, Mrs. Leo Kaufman, who came to Omaha in October with Mr. Kaufman, director of the Orpheum theater orchestra.

Joint Hostesses Tuesday.

Mrs. C. R. Kennedy and Mrs. Willis Taylor will entertain at luncheon and bridge at the home of Mrs. Taylor on Tuesday of next week.

Hosts to Fifty Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Wilson will entertain at dancing in their home on Saturday evening. There will be 50 guests.

At the Fontenelle.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Donahue will entertain at dinner at the Fontenelle Saturday evening.

Saturday Dinner Hosts.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bohman will entertain at dinner on Saturday evening for 12 guests.

The Friday Club Meets.

Mrs. Harry Lawrie will entertain the Friday club this week.

Past Events

Mrs. George Rickelmeier entertained the members of her bridge club on Wednesday.

The Delta Gamma alumnae met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Burdick, with Mrs. Robert Troyer and Miss Carol Howard assistant hostesses.

A Wife's Confessional by Adele Garrison

What Madge Finds Beyond the Little Gate.

At my suggestion that I take charge of the $100 which Mother Graham was carrying to the mysterious apartment she had made, she started violently, clasped her fingers convulsively about the ledge of the taxi-cab window and turned a frightened face to me.

"What do you mean?" she asked. "Have you repented—ending—giving it to me. Oh, Margaret. Don't say that! I must have it this morning. I must!"

I loosened her twitching fingers from the ledge and gathered them tightly in my own, the while her eyes gazed feverishly into mine.

"Of course, you're going to have it," I said, "if you so desire, but—forgive me, mother, if I'm wrong—I don't believe it is your real wish to use this money as you intend doing, and I thought it would be safer with me until you decide just what you wanted to do. I give you my word, that if you ask me for it this morning I will give it to you."

Her Color Fled. The color drained out of her face as she looked at me.

"What do you know of what I intend?" she asked.

Your daughter's deceit is a very serious thing and she should not be shielded from punishment. My advice is to tell her father what happened. It may be that after the truth comes out the father will see that he is not giving his daughter the clothes she needs.

A Selfish Young Man. Dear Miss Allen: I am 29 and have been going about with a young man for the past year. A few months ago we started having disagreements. In the meantime I met someone else who treats me with more consideration.

I like both very much, but the first young man will not be satisfied with being only a friend. I want to be a friend to both. Please tell me what to do.

PERPLEXED. You are right in wishing to keep both young men for friends. Perplexed, since you are not in love with either. Explain this to the first young man. Tell him that you appreciate his friendship, but cannot promise him not to go about with your other friends as well. If he cares for you he will accept your friendship on these terms.

Blonde: Prove by your conduct that you are worthy of their son, and the parents will be glad to have him marry you.

Miss Mary Ellen McLaughlin of Sioux City, Ia., will arrive early in February to be the guest for a week of Miss Edith Royal Tyler.

dear," I said. "Is this person—who is threatening you, apt to hurt you in any way?"

"Only in my heart," she returned, pitifully.

"But," I protested, "you know they found you unconscious when you went out to this woodland the other time."

"I know," she returned, "but no one struck me or hurt me in any way. It was the awful shock of seeing—I must have fainted. I don't remember anything after—"

Her voice trailed away again into tearful silence and I saw that I could get nothing more out of her. The taxi was slowing down, and seeing that we were nearing the house whose address we had given the driver, I spoke softly, warningly to my mother-in-law.

"Dry your eyes quickly," I said. "We shall be getting out in a few seconds."

She obeyed me at once, so successfully that there was nothing unusual in her appearance when we alighted and dismissing the driver, proceeded slowly up the walk to the house which we had selected as our pretended destination.

Fortunately, there was no one at home, so there was no need for us to go through the farcical inquiry concerning imaginary occupants which I had planned. Retracing our steps to the gate, we turned in the direction of the pipe line and went through the little gate, which admitted us to that odd thoroughfare, neither road nor lane, which covers the conduit carrying a reserve supply from the ponds of Long Island to the city water works.

Our detour had taken us a good quarter of a mile away from the woodland back of the Durkee house, which was our destination. But I knew that we had plenty of time to meet Mother Graham's appointment at 10 o'clock, so I made no attempt to hurry her slow, faltering steps.

For my own part, however, I was anxious to get away from the place, for it held memories which I was not anxious to bring back. And then, suddenly, as if an arresting hand had been laid upon my shoulder, I stopped short, threw my head up in startled incredulity. For all around me arose the elusive fragrance of wild roses wet with dew.
