Mrs. Hull spoke on the cultural life of life in Paris, giving her impressions of French families with whom she has had temporary residence.

The French people are too often judged by their cabaret life, according to Mrs. Hull, who declares that the sinews of the nation is in the simple, home loving people all over France.

Music was furnished by Mrs. Eugene Young on the violin, Mrs. Eugene Dinkins, accompanist, and Mrs. Edna Hill, pianist.

SLEEPING BEAUTY

Advertising.

Now the princess was almost grown up, but she had never been allowed to wander anywhere by herself, so afraid were the king and queen that their lovely daughter might come to harm.

However, the afternoon when she was walking in the garden, under the eyes of her mother, she managed to slip away from her ladies-in-waiting.

She went off to a far part of the great big castle and decided she'd explore it all by herself. The castle had so many rooms in it that many of them had never been visited by any one for years.

She went up one winding stairway and when she came to the top she saw a little door. She walked in and found a queer looking old woman sitting beside a strange wooden machine.

"What is that?" asked the princess. "That's a spinning wheel," answered the old woman.

"The princess has run into danger! Color the old woman's cape green. Now watch for what she does tomorrow!"

Art Department to Give Unusual Entertainment.

"Out of the Picture Frame" is the title of the play to be presented by the art department of the Omaha Woman's club at a matinee luncheon to be given at 1 o'clock February 29 at the Y. W. C. A.

From behind a picture frame members of the club will represent such masterpieces as "Song of the Lark," "Blue Boy," "Titan's Daughter," "The Girl With the Broken Pitcher," "Mme. LeBrun and Child" and "Whistler's Mother."

A Wife's Confessionals by Adele Garrison

"Steve" Ungraciously Bows to the Inevitable. The man whom my mother-in-law had called "Steve" wasted no seconds in answering the ultimatum I had given him.

"Anything to please the boss?" he replied, producing the stub of a pencil and a torn envelope for his disreputable clothing. I dictated the directions for finding the farm, following them by crisp caution.

"See to it that you do not mention your errand to any one, for if I find out that you have, all possible negotiations end right there."

"You Will Leave Now." "Saay, sister-in-law," he drawled, "don't you suppose I'm a smart enough guy to know when I'm connected with the business end of a buzz saw?"

"Not likely," he retorted, "since I've been stalking the matter out here, I'd just been slipped the information that you'd moved down east somewhere, and hadn't had time to make any further inquiries when I spied my beloved parent out walking and hurried to her side. The eyes of love you know."

"That his sneer was meant to be provocative, I knew by the watchful eyes above the cynically twisted lips. He would have given much I surmise, to be able to anger me. I guessed that he knew well how to deal with wrathful, emotional women, but that he had no experience with which to meet one who watched him—as I was endeavoring to do—with cool appraisal.

"Then, will you kindly take down your own behavior—and the proof that you are the person you claim to be," I retorted steadily. "But there's one thing more. Before you come to the farm, you are to telephone me from the station, saying you are Mr.——"

"How would Smith do," he queried with a mocking grin as I hesitated. "Robinson," I returned steadily. "An automobile agent who wishes to sell me a car. If my husband whom you are pleased to call your brother, is at home, I shall tell you that I have not the time to consider the matter. Then you are to wait at the railroad station no matter how long, until I have a chance to drive over. But under no circumstances are you to come to the house if Mr. Graham is there unless I tell you to do so."

"Zowie! But my beloved brother must be a terror," he mocked. "I suppose it's the artistic temperament. If I'd only cultivated that instead of the roving foot I might be——"

A little gasp of utter weariness from my mother-in-law gave me swift, incisive utterance. "That will do," I said in the manner I often have used to refractory school boys. "You will leave here now, so that I can take Mother Graham back to the home of her friends."

He eyed me for an instant, then with another sweeping bow turned away from me. "I'd give something to have the gentling of you, my lady," he threw back over his shoulder. There was an intonation in the words that gave me an unaccountable little shiver.

Dear Miss Allen: Am I too young to go out with fellows? I am 14 and in the eighth grade. I expect to graduate the end of June. I am considered good-looking by most fellows. My mother doesn't care if I go, only so that I am careful what fellows I am going with. SHORTY.

A little girl of 14 ought to have time for studies, plenty of sleep and play with her girl friends. Of course

Dear Miss Fairfax: I have learned to love a certain young man and I am sure he cares for me. But he is very bashful and so never makes any advances to me. Should I ask this young man to my home? JEAN.

Yes, by all means invite him to call at your home. There he will meet your parents and become better acquainted with you. A girl's own home is the best background for her friendships. Blue Belle: If the girl doesn't write to you, it's a good sign that she doesn't care for you any more. W. A. K. means, "sealed with a kiss."

Our Thirty-Second Annual February Sale EXTRAORDINARY Commences MONDAY, February 2d Furniture Inspection Days Friday and Saturday

These inspection days are arranged so that you can make comparison and plans before you purchase. For our part we are anxious that customers shall make most careful inspections; by so doing, we are able to establish beyond the shadow of a doubt, just where the best values in furniture can be secured to say nothing of the range of styles and qualities presented.

Our extensive preparations will not interfere with the regular order of business, but merchandise, "on inspection," marked with sale tags cannot be bought or ordered until 9 a. m., Monday, February 2.

The Furniture Consists of hundreds of odd pieces and scores of matched suites from our stock, together with several car loads of very fine season end furniture, we have succeeded in purchasing at about fifty cents on the dollar from a number of Grand Rapids manufacturers.

The Rugs Offered Includes almost every grade of rug made, prices are very low and we believe constitute better values, quality considered, than we have offered in any previous sale of floor coverings. YOU CAN BUY THE RUGS TODAY or any day during the February Sale while stock lasts.

Draperies Most extensive preparations were made for this sale. Mr. Douglas spending several weeks in the mills at Boston, Philadelphia and New York, securing real bargains; these, together with thousands of dollars worth of merchandise from our own stock present a Mecca for the woman with windows to drape and curtain.

Lamps Lamps with shades will be sold complete in combination. The selection will be very wide indeed, including the sample lines of several high-grade manufacturers. Antique metal and turned wood bases, together with fringed and ruched georgette shades are offered in all the best colorings.

Kitchenwares Dinnerwares China Stoves Kitchen Furniture Toys Nursery Furniture Phonographs Office Furniture Hartmann Trunks, Bags and Suit Cases Wonderful bargains from all these departments will go on sale Monday morning.

Exchange You may exchange your old furniture for new; our appraiser will make you a reasonable allowance on the furniture you wish to dispose of.

Our Budget Plan Provides a plan whereby you can purchase at February Sale Prices, paying for same while you use and enjoy the furniture.

A Houseful or an Odd Piece You will be able to furnish from cellar to garret in this sale because the stocks do not consist of just odd pieces, but everything you need for every kind of home.
