Marriage between a man of 30 and Let the guests get into the spirit

To satisfy her parents, Evelyn became engaged to Eugene. But she was not happy. In her eyes, Eugene was too perfect, too gentle and gravely correct. The ideal lover she dreamed of had in him something of the savage. She pictured him as big, virile, masterful, brave. Then in the black, frozen wastes of Alaska, a devil, disguised as Evelyn's ideal of a "man", came into her life. Followed a drama of elemental passion, fierce hate and fiercer love that was to test Eugene's manhood to the limit and try Evelyn's very soul. The outcome is as thrilling as it is unexpected. Evelyn tells the story under the title of "The Primitive Lover." Read it in True Story Maga-zine for March.
