SUFFERED TWO YEARS

Finally Relieved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Says Mrs. Anderson

Rangleley, Maine.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me greatly for pains in the sides and back, headaches and tired feelings. I suffered two years and it seemed as though I could not get my work done from one day to the next. After reading letters from others who had taken the Vegetable Compound I decided to try it and now I can do all kinds of work sewing, washing, ironing and sweeping. Live on a farm and have five in the family so am busy most of the time. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and hope my letter will help some one to take your medicine."

Over 200,000 women have so far replied to our question. "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 out of every 100 of the replies say "Yes," and because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women it should help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Your Problems Solved
by Martha Allen

Her Fickleness to Blame.
Dear Miss Allen: I am a girl of 19. I was going with a nice young man a few years my senior. He gradually became more serious and finally hinted toward marriage. I had never had any thoughts of marriage, and just went with him for a good time. I thought that was all there was in this world—good times and no need of ever getting serious. When he began to show his liking for me I started discouraging him by slighting him and going with other fellows. The result was he gave up and finally quit coming to see me. I was glad at first, as I didn't want to be tied down to any fellow and just wanted good times. After a while I began to realize I cared for him and now I want him back, but he is going with other girls. I believe he still likes me. What can I do to win him back? Please tell me.

ALONESOME GIRL.
You were a very fickle, selfish girl, my dear, and needed to be brought to time with a good lesson and heartache. Any girl who goes with one man after another merely for a good time, not stopping to think that the young men have feelings and are capable of deep love, deserves to suffer herself. Take your lesson: You have played your game and lost. Don't show how disappointed you are; keep up your good cheer and feel that you have learned a valuable lesson for the future. You can be friendly to the man, but nothing more. Perhaps if he still cares for you he will come back. It may be, however, that he had enough of your indifference and will never again put himself in a position to be turned down by you. Always bear in mind that love is a very serious matter. If you trifle with it you will not get the most out of it. Consider the man's feelings and do not be any more willing to hurt than you are to be hurt.

A Wife's Confessional
by Adele Garrison

The Lure Which Madge Dangles Before Mother Graham.
I had brought the right tonic to my mother-in-law. I saw that as her dulled eyes brightened, and the lines of pain in her face became less clearly etched, stronger than most things in Mother Graham's mental make-up is her love for the melodramatic. She is as happy as a child with a cherished toy, when Lillian invents pretexts for her aid in minor details of the problems which my friend's work in the diplomatic secret service entails.

amends by investing my tale of Lillian's wait with as much romance as I could manage, and was rewarded by the shining eyes and glowing face of my mother-in-law when I had finished.

Mother Graham's Interest.
Twenty years appeared to have dropped from her as she asked question after question. When I had given her every scrap of information I possessed, together with some theories which I was glad Lillian was not there to hear, she clasped her hands together like a romantic school girl and exclaimed earnestly: "I never heard anything so interesting. Now, look here, Margaret, I'm perfectly able to go home to the farm. I can sit with you and hold Richard Second on my lap."

that the child would be better off with her, and a demand that I leave him behind, but instead she gave a prompt acquiescence that puzzled me.

"Yes it will be far better for you to take him," she said, "and he'll awaken very easily, if you tell him he is going with you in the car."

which her tone and words unconsciously conveyed. It crumpled my own theory, that the man was a clever impostor. It made me shudder at the trouble and disgrace which I saw looming ahead for us if her conviction were based upon fact. I paid little attention, however, to her dread of the man's taking Junior as a hostage. I had observed him carefully, and I knew that he was too clever a rogue to take the risk which kidnaping would involve.

But the remembrance of an awful day when Grace Draper, far more clever and more desperate than the mysterious tramp, had taken that risk clutched at my heart. It was with hands that trembled that I lifted my small son from his nest among the bedclothes where he had curled himself into a tight ball.
