

SOCIETY

Professional Artists Add Largely to Social Life

HOW largely professional musicians and actors add to the social life of Omaha is realized when invoice is taken of a week or two in our social annals.

Miss Georgia Lee Hall, who has just departed following a most successful engagement here in "Rain" at the Brandeis, gave very generously of her time to former Nebraska friends and new acquaintances.

Miss Lena May Williams, a friend from college days at the University of Nebraska, she attended the meeting of the Community Players at the University club Sunday afternoon and gave a brief talk on the value of the Little Theater movement.

"It has been like a holiday here," said Miss Hall, who was honored with luncheon, dinner and supper engagements throughout her stay.

C. Warwick Evans, cellist for the London String quartet, which plays at the Brandeis theater Thursday night for the Tuesday Musical club, was formerly a friend and college mate in London of Dr. R. Mills Silby, who anticipates not only the Thursday concert, but a renewal of friendship with Mr. Evans at that time.

When Tangier Temple of the Masonic order presents its movie revue and ball Monday night, March 2, 12 stars of the screen will appear and mingle with guests at the affair.

Dr. and Mrs. Pollard Entertain, Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Pollard gave 40 of their friends a thoroughly delightful evening Sunday, when they presented Miss Mildred Mahan, new faculty member of the Misner school, in a three-act play, "Romance," made famous by Miss Doris Keene. Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Sunney, who are great admirers of Miss Keene in the play, pronounced Miss Mahan quite as talented and interesting and possessed the added ability of giving the entire drama herself.

Another Sunday night affair centering in the theater was given by Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Baxter, when they received a few friends for Gregory Foley, new director for the Community Players.

Mr. and Mrs. Joy Sutphen will entertain at a supper dance Tuesday night for Miss Miltzi Hajos, who fills a two-day engagement at the Brandeis this week.

Miss Barker Bride of Mr. Bussing at Beautiful Pre-Lenten Wedding

At high noon Monday Miss Elizabeth Barker, daughter of one of Omaha's most prominent pioneer families, was given in marriage by her father, Joseph Barker, to Irvin Bussing of Toronto, Canada, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bussing of Evansville, Ind.

The bridegroom was made of crepe flannel in simple straight lines. It was sleeveless, round-necked and decorated with pearls. The court train was embroidered to match and was bordered with a frill of tulle. Her bridal veil, which rippled down to her waist, was caught in a close cap and coronet of rose point lace, and Easter lilies made the bridal bouquet.

Miss Barker wore the gift of the groom, a platinum watch, and the diamond bangle which her grandparents, the E. P. Pecks, gave her.

The bridesmaids, Misses Peggy Reed, Nan Hunter, and Louise Bussing, sister of the groom, wore reseda green chiffon. These frocks were made with tiny cap sleeves and little turnover collars with long, floating streamers.

Girdles of bugle beads made huge bows in front, with tassels hanging to the hem. Blond satin slippers were worn with them, and tulle hats, whose broad lace brims were trimmed with water lilies. They carried jonquils, fuchsia and maidenhair.

Miss Virginia Barker, the bride's sister, was her maid of honor. She appeared in a petal frock of deep mauve, trimmed with brown satin slippers, and a brown hat of lace and tulle wreathed in tulips. She carried a bouquet of vari-colored garden blooms.

Ushers were Morse Palmer, Dr. Earl Sage, Floyd Smith, Jr., Dr. Allyn Moser was best man.

The ceremony was performed in St. Barnabas church by Rev. Father Holsapple, Ben Van Dahl and Melford Skow were altar boys. St. Barnabas choir sang the wedding chorus, accompanied by Mrs. Louise Shattuck Zabriske at the organ.

The church was decorated with greenery, calla lilies, fuchsia and other white flowers. An unusual note was the screen of asparagus, which hung from the beam before the chancel.

Mrs. Barker, mother of the bride, was clad in brown satin, and wore with it a hat in matching nuances, trimmed with pink chrysanthemums.

Following the wedding a bridal breakfast was served at the Barker home for the family and members of the wedding party.

Mr. and Mrs. Bussing leave this evening for Toronto, where they will make their home temporarily. In the late spring they will make their permanent residence in New York, where their romance began in Columbia university.

At the dinner given Sunday at the Barker home for members of the wedding party the bride presented her attendants with headed evening bags of beige trimmed with flowers.

In society the bride's absence will be felt. She is a member of the Junior League, and a former princess of Ak-Sar-Ben.

Miss Virginia Barker, the bride's sister, was her maid of honor. She appeared in a petal frock of deep mauve, trimmed with brown satin slippers, and a brown hat of lace and tulle wreathed in tulips. She carried a bouquet of vari-colored garden blooms.

Ushers were Morse Palmer, Dr. Earl Sage, Floyd Smith, Jr., Dr. Allyn Moser was best man.

The ceremony was performed in St. Barnabas church by Rev. Father Holsapple, Ben Van Dahl and Melford Skow were altar boys. St. Barnabas choir sang the wedding chorus, accompanied by Mrs. Louise Shattuck Zabriske at the organ.

The church was decorated with greenery, calla lilies, fuchsia and other white flowers. An unusual note was the screen of asparagus, which hung from the beam before the chancel.

Mrs. Barker, mother of the bride, was clad in brown satin, and wore with it a hat in matching nuances, trimmed with pink chrysanthemums.

Following the wedding a bridal breakfast was served at the Barker home for the family and members of the wedding party.

Mr. and Mrs. Bussing leave this evening for Toronto, where they will make their home temporarily. In the late spring they will make their permanent residence in New York, where their romance began in Columbia university.

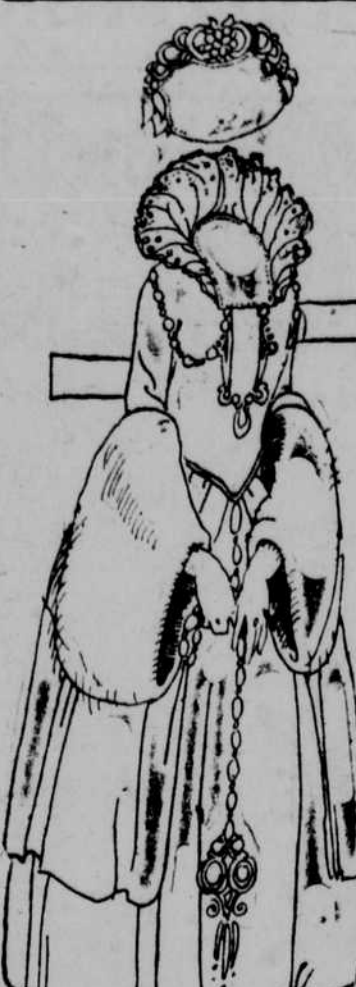

At the dinner given Sunday at the Barker home for members of the wedding party the bride presented her attendants with headed evening bags of beige trimmed with flowers.

In society the bride's absence will be felt. She is a member of the Junior League, and a former princess of Ak-Sar-Ben.

Miss Virginia Barker, the bride's sister, was her maid of honor. She appeared in a petal frock of deep mauve, trimmed with brown satin slippers, and a brown hat of lace and tulle wreathed in tulips. She carried a bouquet of vari-colored garden blooms.

Ushers were Morse Palmer, Dr. Earl Sage, Floyd Smith, Jr., Dr. Allyn Moser was best man.

Little Snow-White

Snow-White Grows Older.

This is the second day's chapter of the famous old story, "Snow-White." Children who follow this story and cut out the pictures every day will have a complete set of "Snow-White" Paper Dolls.

When poor little Snow-White was born the good queen, her mother, died. About a year afterwards the king married another wife, who was beautiful but very proud and haughty.

In her room hung a magic mirror. The queen would look into it and say: "Mirror, mirror on the wall, who is the fairest of us all?"

"Thou art the fairest, lady queen," However, little Snow-White was growing older and more beautiful every day. The vain queen began to be secretly jealous of her beauty.

(Color Snow-White's dress red with deep cuffs of white fur. The ornament about her head and the chain down the front are of gold.)

The Reeds Will Send Summer in Europe.

Mrs. A. L. Reed and her daughters, Misses Erna and Peggy, are planning a summer European trip.

The Misses Reed, Mrs. Floyd Smith, Jr., and Miss Nan Hunter leave Wednesday evening for New York City. The Misses Reed and Miss Hunter will remain a month. Mrs. Smith will visit her parents and sister there.

Mrs. Edgar H. Scott, her daughter, Miss Eleanor Scott, and her sister-in-law, Miss Laura Scott, will return March 1 from Washington, D. C., where they have spent several weeks.

A Wife's Confessional by Adele Garrison

How Madge Meets a Problem Familiar to Many Mothers.

As I neared Jamaica and slowed down for the traffic, I expunged from my mind all conjectures concerning the possible connection of Edith Fairfax's parting questions with Dick's comments upon my love for the farm house. I gained nothing by thinking about the coincidence, I told myself. Then I did the fresh crisp Autumn air did its part in blowing the merriments out of my system.

I looked to the fastening of the car door on Junior's side and bade my little lad struggle closely to me and put one arm around my neck. Thus assured that he was in no danger of tumbling out or of interfering with my gear shifting, I bent my whole attention to threading the traffic of the boulevard. When I finally turned away from the congested streets, down the short block that led to the Long Island station of Forest Hills, and parked the car, it lacked but a few minutes of the hour Lillian had named as that of her arrival.

With the knowledge of a necessary task left unperformed, I turned to my small son, and lifting him to my lap spoke slowly, impressively: "Junior, Mother has something very important to tell you, something she doesn't want you to do."

His eyes, clear, beautiful, lifted to mine in the rapt stare which small children give when they are trying to attend the puzzling demands of their elders.

"What mustn't I do?" he asked. "You mustn't ask any questions when Aunt Lillian and Marion get off the train."

"Are they coming on the train," he demanded excitedly. "Which train? When? Where does it come? I don't see any track."

Junior's Questions. Every mother can echo the sigh with which I shifted ground. "I will show you the track in a minute if you are good," I said. "You are not being good now. I told you not to ask questions and you began to do it right away."

"But, Mamma," he told me with the remorseless logic of childhood. "You didn't tell me not to ask questions now. You said when Aunt Lillian and Marion get off the train. They didn't get off did they?"

I bent and kissed the puzzled little face with swift contrition. "No, dear, they didn't, and Mother was wrong. I see you're trying to be my very good boy."

His face broke into happy smiles and he put his arms around my neck and hugged me.

"Am I your darling, good, sweetest, heart boy?" he asked, repeating a phrase of endearment of which he is especially fond.

"Yes, indeed, you are my darling, good, sweetest heart boy," I repeated. "But you won't be if you don't listen to Mother."

He took down his arms and folded his hands, composing himself into an absurd, adorable, listening attitude.

"Shoot!" he ejaculated with such lifelike imitation of Katie that I had to fight down a laugh which would have puzzled and offended him.

"Mother Will Tell You." "Aunt Lillian is bringing a strange lady with her," I said, emphasizing the words with a reassuring forefinger, and you mustn't speak to her or ask any questions about her. When we get home Mother will tell

AN OBLIGING BEAUTY DOCTOR

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and 1/4 ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

Send the Coupon for 10-Day Test

Gloriously Clear Teeth

Why you may already have them—and yet not realize it

Make this unique test. Find out what beauty is beneath the dingy film that clouds your teeth

Do you seriously want dazzlingly clear teeth?—teeth that add immeasurably to your personality and attractiveness?

You can have them, if you wish. That's been proved times without number. But not by continuing with old methods of cleansing and of brushing.

Modern science has discovered a new way. A radically different principle from old ways; and based on latest scientific findings. This offers you a test, free. Simply mail the coupon.

How to gain them—quickly There's a film on your teeth. Run your tongue across your teeth and you can feel it. Beneath it are the pretty teeth you envy in others. Ordinary methods won't successfully remove it.

That is why this test is offered. For when you remove that film, you'll be surprised at what you find. You may actually have beautiful teeth already—and yet not realize it. Find out!

What that film is Most tooth troubles now are traced to film. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays.

Germs by the millions breed in it. And they, with tartar are the chief cause of pyorrhea and decay.

That film, too, absorbs stains... stains from food, from smoking, from various causes. And that is why your teeth look "off color."

New methods now remove it Old-time dentifrices could not successfully fight that film. So most people had dingy teeth. And tooth troubles increased alarmingly.

Now new methods have been found. And embodied in a new type tooth paste called Pepsodent.

It acts to curdle the film, then harmlessly to remove it. No soap, no chalk, no harsh grit dangerous to enamel.

It proves the folly of ugly teeth. It gives better protection against pyorrhea, of tooth troubles both in adults and in children.

Ten days' use will prove its benefits. And that 10 days is offered to you as a test. Why not make it then—hate prettier teeth, whiter teeth? Send the coupon now.

FREE Mail Coupon for 10-Day Test

THE PEPSODENT COMPANY, Box 273, 1104 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

Send to: Name Address

Only one tube to a family.

you all about her. And you mustn't call loudly when you see Marion or jump up and down, because the lady with Aunt Lillian isn't well and you'll disturb her."

"Has she a headache?" Junior asked, his face full of interest. I knew that he was linking this comment with similar ones he has received when I have suffered from headache.

"Yes, her head is very bad," I returned, feeling that I could not make a more truthful answer to his question. "You will remember won't you Junior, that you must be very quiet when you run up to Marion and that you must not ask any questions?"

"I'll remember," he said earnestly with one of his occasional lapses into his babyhood lisp—lapses which I have not the heart to correct and which, indeed, like most mothers, I fancy, I cherish jealously. "Will you show me the track now?"

I smiled at my baby Sherlock, and descending the stairs to the platform and showed him the track. Even as you all about her. And you mustn't call loudly when you see Marion or jump up and down, because the lady with Aunt Lillian isn't well and you'll disturb her."

"Has she a headache?" Junior asked, his face full of interest. I knew that he was linking this comment with similar ones he has received when I have suffered from headache.

"Yes, her head is very bad," I returned, feeling that I could not make a more truthful answer to his question. "You will remember won't you Junior, that you must be very quiet when you run up to Marion and that you must not ask any questions?"

"I'll remember," he said earnestly with one of his occasional lapses into his babyhood lisp—lapses which I have not the heart to correct and which, indeed, like most mothers, I fancy, I cherish jealously. "Will you show me the track now?"

I smiled at my baby Sherlock, and descending the stairs to the platform and showed him the track. Even as you all about her. And you mustn't call loudly when you see Marion or jump up and down, because the lady with Aunt Lillian isn't well and you'll disturb her."

"Has she a headache?" Junior asked, his face full of interest. I knew that he was linking this comment with similar ones he has received when I have suffered from headache.

"Yes, her head is very bad," I returned, feeling that I could not make a more truthful answer to his question. "You will remember won't you Junior, that you must be very quiet when you run up to Marion and that you must not ask any questions?"

"I'll remember," he said earnestly with one of his occasional lapses into his babyhood lisp—lapses which I have not the heart to correct and which, indeed, like most mothers, I fancy, I cherish jealously. "Will you show me the track now?"

I smiled at my baby Sherlock, and descending the stairs to the platform and showed him the track. Even as you all about her. And you mustn't call loudly when you see Marion or jump up and down, because the lady with Aunt Lillian isn't well and you'll disturb her."

"Has she a headache?" Junior asked, his face full of interest. I knew that he was linking this comment with similar ones he has received when I have suffered from headache.

"Yes, her head is very bad," I returned, feeling that I could not make a more truthful answer to his question. "You will remember won't you Junior, that you must be very quiet when you run up to Marion and that you must not ask any questions?"

"I'll remember," he said earnestly with one of his occasional lapses into his babyhood lisp—lapses which I have not the heart to correct and which, indeed, like most mothers, I fancy, I cherish jealously. "Will you show me the track now?"

I smiled at my baby Sherlock, and descending the stairs to the platform and showed him the track. Even as you all about her. And you mustn't call loudly when you see Marion or jump up and down, because the lady with Aunt Lillian isn't well and you'll disturb her."

"Has she a headache?" Junior asked, his face full of interest. I knew that he was linking this comment with similar ones he has received when I have suffered from headache.

"Yes, her head is very bad," I returned, feeling that I could not make a more truthful answer to his question. "You will remember won't you Junior, that you must be very quiet when you run up to Marion and that you must not ask any questions?"

"I'll remember," he said earnestly with one of his occasional lapses into his babyhood lisp—lapses which I have not the heart to correct and which, indeed, like most mothers, I fancy, I cherish jealously. "Will you show me the track now?"

I smiled at my baby Sherlock, and descending the stairs to the platform and showed him the track. Even as you all about her. And you mustn't call loudly when you see Marion or jump up and down, because the lady with Aunt Lillian isn't well and you'll disturb her."

"Has she a headache?" Junior asked, his face full of interest. I knew that he was linking this comment with similar ones he has received when I have suffered from headache.

"Yes, her head is very bad," I returned, feeling that I could not make a more truthful answer to his question. "You will remember won't you Junior, that you must be very quiet when you run up to Marion and that you must not ask any questions?"

"I'll remember," he said earnestly with one of his occasional lapses into his babyhood lisp—lapses which I have not the heart to correct and which, indeed, like most mothers, I fancy, I cherish jealously. "Will you show me the track now?"

I smiled at my baby Sherlock, and descending the stairs to the platform and showed him the track. Even as you all about her. And you mustn't call loudly when you see Marion or jump up and down, because the lady with Aunt Lillian isn't well and you'll disturb her."

"Has she a headache?" Junior asked, his face full of interest. I knew that he was linking this comment with similar ones he has received when I have suffered from headache.

"Yes, her head is very bad," I returned, feeling that I could not make a more truthful answer to his question. "You will remember won't you Junior, that you must be very quiet when you run up to Marion and that you must not ask any questions?"

"I'll remember," he said earnestly with one of his occasional lapses into his babyhood lisp—lapses which I have not the heart to correct and which, indeed, like most mothers, I fancy, I cherish jealously. "Will you show me the track now?"

I smiled at my baby Sherlock, and descending the stairs to the platform and showed him the track. Even as you all about her. And you mustn't call loudly when you see Marion or jump up and down, because the lady with Aunt Lillian isn't well and you'll disturb her."

"Has she a headache?" Junior asked, his face full of interest. I knew that he was linking this comment with similar ones he has received when I have suffered from headache.

"Yes, her head is very bad," I returned, feeling that I could not make a more truthful answer to his question. "You will remember won't you Junior, that you must be very quiet when you run up to Marion and that you must not ask any questions?"

"I'll remember," he said earnestly with one of his occasional lapses into his babyhood lisp—lapses which I have not the heart to correct and which, indeed, like most mothers, I fancy, I cherish jealously. "Will you show me the track now?"

I smiled at my baby Sherlock, and descending the stairs to the platform and showed him the track. Even as you all about her. And you mustn't call loudly when you see Marion or jump up and down, because the lady with Aunt Lillian isn't well and you'll disturb her."

"Has she a headache?" Junior asked, his face full of interest. I knew that he was linking this comment with similar ones he has received when I have suffered from headache.

"Yes, her head is very bad," I returned, feeling that I could not make a more truthful answer to his question. "You will remember won't you Junior, that you must be very quiet when you run up to Marion and that you must not ask any questions?"

"I'll remember," he said earnestly with one of his occasional lapses into his babyhood lisp—lapses which I have not the heart to correct and which, indeed, like most mothers, I fancy, I cherish jealously. "Will you show me the track now?"

I smiled at my baby Sherlock, and descending the stairs to the platform and showed him the track. Even as you all about her. And you mustn't call loudly when you see Marion or jump up and down, because the lady with Aunt Lillian isn't well and you'll disturb her."

"Has she a headache?" Junior asked, his face full of interest. I knew that he was linking this comment with similar ones he has received when I have suffered from headache.

Return From Honolulu.

Landing in San Francisco, Tuesday, from Honolulu will be Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allison, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Scannel, Mr. and Mrs. Mochler Colpetzer, Mrs. Katherine Allison, Mrs. Albert Sibbensen and Miss Ellen Creighton.

Mrs. James Drakeford of the Blackstone hotel is a patient at Clarkson hospital.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Advertisements.

Fine Arts Reception.

Members of the board of the Omaha Society of Fine Arts will receive at the galleries in the library on Friday evening from 8.30 to 10 o'clock. The exhibition of American paintings and old Valentines will remain hung until after that date.

Chiffon Hosiery

"Burlington" Chiffons are the best we know at 100 Pair

Buy All Your Hosiery at Thorne's. F. W. Thorne Co. 1812 Farnam St.

ASK for Horlick's

The ORIGINAL Malted Milk Safe Milk and Diet For infants, Invalids, The Aged

For Growing Children

Contains the valuable muscle and bone forming elements found in the grain and whole milk. Raises happy, robust children. Nutritious and easily assimilated. Prepared at home by stirring the powder in hot or cold water. No cooking.

Women, Save Your Health

Buy these labor-saving household appliances at easy terms

Your health is a priceless asset. Washing, ironing and sewing are hard labor. Electricity will relieve you of this labor by the washing machine, the ironer and the sewing machine.

Premier Cleaners

The Premier Cleaner will clean your rugs thoroughly without