

Livestock Price Gains for Week

Beef Steers and Fat Cows 50c Higher Than Previous Week.

The weekly United States Department of Agriculture South Omaha Livestock review follows:
Cattle: Curtailment of receipts, here and elsewhere, coupled with a stronger turn to the dressed beef markets at eastern cities, were bullish factors in the week's fat cattle trade. An upward trend to values started late last week and continued practically throughout the week with the result that a comparison of closing values with those of a week ago shows beef steers and fat cows and heifers around 50 cents higher. Choice weighty beef steers established a top for the period, $10.65, with medium weights noted upward to $10.50. Bulls held firm, while veals show little or no change.
Stocks and feeder trade carried a strong undertone with the advancing fat cattle prices and a net upturn of around 25 cents is recorded. Bulk of stocker and feeder sales are noted at $6.25 to $7.75. Top $8.60 with thin cows and heifers mostly $3.50 to $5.50.
Hogs: Sweeping advances were recorded in the hog trade. Heavy exports of lard with diminishing movement of hogs to leading markets coupled with good shipping inquiry and a broad packer demand have been principal factors in bringing about further improvement. In a general way hog prices for the seven day period, under review, have worked 75 cents to $1 higher. Thursday's bulk of sales ranged from $11.25 to $11.55, top, $11.90.
Sheep: Comparing current fat lamb values with those of a week ago shows a net advance of 15 to 25 cents. Thursday's bulk of fed lambs cleared at $14.60 to $14.75, to $17.00. Fat sheep are 25 to 50 cents higher, bulk fat ewes, $7.25 to $9.10, top, $9.45. Feeding and shearing lambs held steady, desirable fat lambs, $15.75 to $17.25, shearing lambs upward to $16.70.

Farewell Reception Given F. H. Cox Family at Hampton

Hampton, Feb. 27.—A farewell reception was held Wednesday night at the school house in honor of F. H. Cox and family. Mr. Cox has been a resident of Hampton practically all his life and has lived on the same section of land since 1850 when as a small child he came here with his parents.
After a lively athletic meet in the gymnasium, the crowd moved to the high school auditorium where a program of vocal and instrumental music and readings was given.
S. C. Houghton, vice president of the First National bank, said that the reception was given especially in recognition of Mr. Cox's long service (14 years), as member of the board of education of the Hampton schools. He presented the Cox family with a large and beautifully framed picture, "Daybreak," by Randall Parrish.
Mr. Cox is moving to York where he is employed in the American State bank.

Dr. Reagor, who will have charge of the testing, explained the methods employed.

Actress Who Refused to Disrobe on Stage, Dismissed From Show

By EARL L. SHAUB, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.
New York, Feb. 27.—"I have to earn my living, but that doesn't mean that I am going to strip all my clothes off for the sake of the box office."
Such was the indignant explanation given by Isabel Hebert, star in "White Cargo," who was dismissed from a road company at Baltimore because she would not disrobe on the stage.
She has been playing the role of the half-breed, Tondeleia, and was asked to remove a silk bodice, which was practically all she had on.
"It isn't fair to ask me to do that sort of thing," she protested to the management.

In reply she received a shrug of the shoulders in the direction of the box office. Then she added:
"I mean it. Either I am adequately clothed or I must decline to play."
Then came the notice of her dismissal.
"On reaching New York today she conferred with her lawyers and they gave an interview in which she said: "I was brought up to regard decency as one of the dearest possessions of a woman. And there is a certain limit beyond which I will not go."
"Don't think I am a prude. I am worldly enough to portray certain roles; but they asked too much."

Ostrich Egg Placed in Incubator at Stetzel Farm

Audubon, Ia., Feb. 27.—Probably the largest egg that will be placed in any incubator in Iowa this season is the one that is now in an incubator on the farm of Ira Stetzel, residing near this city.
It is an ostrich egg that Mrs. Stetzel received Wednesday from Arizona and it was sent to her by her brother-in-law, Frank C. Pellett, formerly Iowa state apiarist and resident of Atlantic, and now co-editor of the American Bee Journal at Hamilton, Ill.
The egg weighs two pounds 12 ounces and measures 17 inches around the long way and 15 inches around the shorter way, and is of a glossy, cream-white color.
Although the egg was fresh when mailed, and was carefully wrapped and packed, there is much conjecture as to whether or not it will hatch in the incubator. The period of incubation is about six weeks.

2 Unaccounted for in Big Blaze

Temperature of 3 Below Zero. With Stiff Wind, Impedes Firemen.

St. Paul, Feb. 27.—More than $750,000 loss was suffered early today when fire gutted the Hendricks building, in the heart of the business district here. Two persons were unaccounted for and fire officials were making a check to determine their fate.
Three persons were rescued from the burning building, which was one of the older structures in the business section.
At 4:30 a. m. the structure was still burning, but the blaze was sufficiently under control to prevent it from spreading to adjoining buildings.
Eight below zero weather and a stiff wind hampered firemen.
A jewelry store, a hat shop, a photographer's studio and several other offices in the building were destroyed.
Several persons were rescued with difficulty by firemen. Max Goldberg, a tailor, escaped by sliding down a rope from a window.
The origin of the fire is undetermined.
The persons unaccounted for are musicians, a man and a woman, whose names are unknown.
Late last night fire did $250,000 damage to the St. Paul foundry, which was extinguished only a few hours before the morning's blaze.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

When you've a chance don't hesitate. Just seize it ere it be too late.
—Peter Rabbit

Peter Takes His Chance.
Peter Rabbit was seeing something that he had never even dreamed he would have a chance to see. He was seeing Buster Bear awaken from his long winter sleep. It was something very few people have ever seen. It was something he would remember all the rest of his life, but that just then he would rather not have seen.
Buster was making the queerest noises. There were whines and grunts and growls all mixed together. He snuffed and snorted. He drew long breaths. Peter crouched as far back as he could get and, making himself as small as he could, shivered and shook. Buster began to twitch his big legs and then to kick them out. You know he was very stiff. He was a long time about it, but at last Buster got to his feet.

the entrance Buster poked his head out and then he stood for a long, long time. He couldn't seem to make up his mind to go out. Once he half turned as if he had decided not to go out. You should have seen Peter Rabbit scurry back to the very back of that cave. My, but Peter was scared!

Peter held his breath. Would Buster look around in that bedroom of his? But Buster didn't. He shook himself. He had stopped making those strange noises. He was making only one noise now, and that was a growl, a grumbly, rumbling growl way down in his throat. He was back to Peter. He was looking out toward the entrance. Slowly, oh, so slowly he began to move toward that entrance. He moved very slowly. He grunted with every step. It seemed to Peter that he never would get to that entrance.
Very softly Peter stole along behind him. He didn't dare get close to Buster's heels, but he wanted to be near enough to run out of that bedroom at the very first chance. At crept into it. Not until then did he look back. Buster Bear was standing right there at the entrance to his bedroom, blinking his eyes.

"Now where did that long-eared rascal come from?" grumbled Buster with a funny look of surprise on his face. "I didn't see him anywhere about. Yet he seemed to run out from right under my nose. If I were hungry I'd just go pull that pile of brush to pieces. But I don't feel hungry. I don't feel as if I had any stomach at all. I guess I'll look around a bit and then I'll go back and finish my sleep."

So without another look in Peter's direction Buster Bear slowly shuffled away. Peter drew a long breath.

Then he looked around sharply to see if Reddy Fox was anywhere about. Reddy wasn't. Peter drew another long breath. "I can't get back to the dear Old Briar Patch too quickly," said he, and off he started.

sniffing. He grumbled at the snow. "I've waked up too early," growled Buster in his grumbly, rumbling voice. "I've waked up too early. I may as well go back and go to sleep again."
But he didn't go back. He put one paw out in the snow and then drew it back. He did the same thing with the other paw. Finally he went wholly outside and stood looking around.
Now Peter was right at his heels. Now was his chance. With a great jump Peter bounded out past Buster Bear, and away he went lippety-lippety-lip. My, how Peter did run! He made straight for a pile of brush and
