

Nation to Hear Inaugural Talk

Miles of Telephone Lines to Link Radio Stations From Coast to Coast.

By ROBERT S. THORNBURG, International News Service Staff.

Washington, March 3.—Twenty million Americans will hear ceremonies attending the inauguration of Calvin Coolidge as 30th president of the United States tomorrow.

By means of the greatest radio hookup ever attempted, the words of President Coolidge's speech as he sounds the keynote of his administration in his inaugural address will be carried to the farthest corners of the land.

Details of the gigantic station interconnection project were completed today by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone company and the Radio Corporation of America.

To Span Continent.

The telephone company, with WEAF of New York as the key station, will span the United States, making possible rebroadcast of the inaugural so that the occasion before the national capital, virtually, will be within earshot of the nation.

Particular attention has been given to the inter-connections in the middle-west and in the view of government radio experts, tomorrow's inauguration marks the beginning of more frequent hook-ups that will place the wide agricultural and industrial regions between the Appalachians and the Rockies in the hearing distance of affairs at the national capital and other eastern cities.

The Hook-Ups.

The hook-ups follow: Middle-west: WEAF, Cleveland; WJW, Cincinnati; WWJ, Detroit; WMAQ, Chicago; WDAF, Kansas City; WFO, Des Moines; WCCO, Minneapolis, and KLZ, Denver.

Pacific coast: KSL, Los Angeles; KFO, San Francisco, and KLN, Oakland, Cal.

The Radio Corporation will hook-up: WRC, Washington; WGY, Schenectady, and WJZ, New York.

Broadcasting will start about noon Wednesday. Six microphones will be placed on the speakers' stand from which the inaugural address is to be made. Two of the phones will be used by WEAF, two, WRC, and two for the loud speaker connections, which will carry words of the speakers to all parts of the crowd.

Husband Says He Found Ground Glass in Bread; Seeks Divorce

Mathias Nielsen, formerly a farmer near Millard, now residing in Omaha, filed a cross petition in district court Tuesday, asking a divorce from Elizabeth Nielsen, who sued him a few weeks ago, asking $10,000 alimony.

Only two weeks after the wedding bells rang, he alleges, his bride demanded that he deed to her his 80-acre farm and his personal property. When he declined she told him she "hated him, would curse him as long as she lived."

Bestowed Epithets.

She called him a "yellow cur" and bestowed epithets upon his parents, he alleges.

"One day in the spring of 1922, while he and the hired man was eating dinner, she rolled up her sleeves, took a butcher knife, sharpened it on the edge of a crock and raised it to stab him, he charges. Only the intervention of the hired man saved him.

She would go out into the barnyard at night and sing weird songs, beating accompaniments with knives on tin pans and making loud threats, he relates.

Ground Glass in Bread.

He charges she caused a false deed to be prepared and registered transferring his property through Paul Oney, then an employe of the register of deeds office, to her. After he discovered this and proceeded to have it annulled, he says, he found ground glass in his bread.

For the last 12 years, he says, she has lived separate and apart from him, though under the same roof.

PICKLE INDUSTRY HINGES ON LABOR

Chadron, March 3.—The problem of finding laborers to gather the cucumbers seems to be the only question confronting the Squire-Dingee Pickle company in starting up its industry in Dawes county. Other conditions for beginning the pickle industry are favorable, especially in the vicinity of Crawford.

C. H. Prickart, representative of the Squire-Dingee company, has completed a survey of the territory. He made a trip to the Pine Ridge reservation to seek aid of the government authorities in gaining the help of Indians during the harvest of the cucumbers.

In connection with the raising of cucumbers it is also the plan of the Squire-Dingee company to build a factory at Crawford. Mr. Prickart is leaving with intent to recommend that the company make use of its opportunity to occupy this territory.

Two Trackmen Injured in Collision at Crossing

Shelton, March 3.—Irvine VanWey, section foreman for the Union Pacific at this place, had his cheekbone crushed and Earl Danaher, 23, of Wood River, was slightly bruised when a motor car on which VanWey and three other men were riding crashed into a coupe driven by Danaher at the railroad crossing one mile east of the local stockyards.

VanWey stated that he was stooping over adjusting a valve cap on the motor and did not see the auto until it closed upon it. None of the other section men were injured, according to their story, and Danaher says he did not see the car until it was too late to avoid a crash.

Samardick Under Secret Scrutiny

Dry Sleuth Admits Investigation; Senator Howell Asks for Facts.

Robert Samardick, prohibition enforcement officer, has been under investigation again, this time by a federal secret service agent.

This secret agent left Omaha Monday with a full report of Samardick's practices, which will be delivered to Washington officials. The result of the investigation is secret.

Admits Investigation.

The facts regarding the secret investigation, the fourth which Samardick has undergone in the last six months, were admitted by Samardick Tuesday in an interview with an Omaha Bee reporter. He said he had known for several days that the secret agent was in Omaha, checking up on his methods of prohibition enforcement.

"I don't care how many investigators they send," Samardick said. "They can't get anything on me." It is known that these other investigators have been sent to Omaha in the last six months to investigate Samardick's alleged brutalities, which resulted six weeks ago in the filing of a series of assault and battery charges by County Attorney Henry Beal.

Howell Asks Facts.

It also became known Tuesday that Senator R. H. Howell had recently written to a prominent republican leader in Omaha asking for the facts regarding Samardick's alleged brutalities.

"I could never condone such practices, if the reports are true," the letter said in part.

Playmates Are Pallbearers at Funeral of Car Victim

Beatrice, March 3.—Rites for little Frances Irwin, who was killed last week, when struck by a car in charge of John Fritzen, farmer, were held at the Scott-Harman chapel, the service being read by Rev. Mr. Stuck. The funeral was held at the First Christian church. The casket was almost buried in floral offerings, and the casket bearers were six little girl friends of the victim. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Irwin of this city.

Pawnee Bridge Contract Awarded Walker Robb

Pawnee City, March 3.—The bridge contract in Pawnee county for the year of 1925 was awarded to Walker Robb of Pawnee City, whose bid was the lowest.

The two other bidders were the Allied Contractors of Omaha and the Home Construction company, also of Omaha. The Allied Contractors had bid the contract for several years. The bridge work of Pawnee county amounts to about $30,000 a year.

Zero Temperature Follows Heavy Snowfall at Beatrice

Beatrice, March 3.—Zero temperature prevailed in this section of the state yesterday, following a heavy fall of snow Sunday afternoon and evening. The moisture will be of inestimable value to winter wheat.

Disaster very often ends in proving just who are our friends. —Thurber the Ostrich.

A Queer Looking Thing.

Farmer Brown's boy had had a talk with Farmer Brown and now he was very busy. He was very busy indeed. Lying on the ground near the barn was an old telephone pole. Farmer Brown's boy fastened a stout rope to one end of this, and then with a horse he dragged it—where do you think? He dragged it over as near as he could to the place where had stood the tree in which Plunger and Mrs. Plunger, the Ospreys, had had their home for several years.

Then he went back to the barn and got a big old cart wheel. This he rolled over to the same place. Then with saw and hammer and nails and braces he went to work. He fastened that cart wheel to the smaller end of that pole, and he took pains to see that it was securely fastened and braced. It took him some time. When this was finished he went back to the barn and got a shovel. Then he began digging a hole.

All this time he had been watched with the liveliest curiosity. Striped

"It is harmless, anyway," cried Blackie the Crow as he perched on the rim of that cart wheel.

Chipmunk, Chatterer the Red Squirrel, Happy Jack Squirrel, Sammy Jay, Blackie the Crow and of course Plunger and Mrs. Plunger had watched and wondered. What was Farmer Brown's boy doing?

"Did you ever see such a queer thing?" demanded a Striped Chipmunk.

"I never did," replied Happy Jack, "I wonder what it is for. I wonder why he has brought it way over here to the edge of the Green Forest."

Sammy Jay and Blackie the Crow kept their tongues still, but their eyes were very busy. They were full of curiosity. As you know, there are no smarter people in all the Green Forest than these two. Both pride themselves on knowing all about these two-legged creatures called men. Both pride themselves on knowing all about the queer things that men build and use. But here was something they had never seen. They couldn't even guess what it could be for. And because they couldn't guess what it could be for they were rather suspicious of it.

Danger From Dogs Stirs West Point

Serum Treatment Given Two Boys Suffering From Bites—Animals Confined.

West Point, March 3.—A mad-dog scare is raising a disturbance in West Point. Two small boys were severely bitten and two head of cattle and a horse shot because of wounds received from dogs.

A 4-year-old son of Charles Mack, was bitten over his eye which swelled immediately. Serum was administered and the boy is coming through safely.

A son of Hans Sorensen was bitten in the leg and arm. The dog was pulled off in time to save the boy from an attack in the face. He was stopped digging he had a deep hole. That hole puzzled the hidden watchmen quite as much as did the queer thing he had made. All of them had a look at it while Farmer Brown's boy was back at the house. Presently he returned and with him was Farmer Brown. They brought ropes and pulleys.

Farmer Brown's boy climbed a stout tree and high up in this he fastened a pulley. Through this he ran a stout rope. One end of this was fastened to the pole on the ground. Then Farmer Brown's boy and Farmer Brown began pulling on that rope. Little by little they raised the end of that telephone pole to which the cart wheel had been fastened. It was hard work. But at last they succeeded in getting the big end of that pole into the hole Farmer Brown's boy had dug, and there was watchmen came over to examine the cart wheel at the top. Then Farmer Brown's boy packed earth in around that pole until it was standing there as solidly as if it had grown there.

He climbed the pole and took off the rope, and he climbed the tree and took off the pulley. Then he and Farmer Brown went back to the house. They had hardly turned their backs when the eager, curious, watchmen came over to examine that queer thing. What could it be for? Not one of them could guess. "It is harmless anyway," said Blackie the Crow as he perched on the rim of that cart wheel. (Copyright, 1925.)

Ford

Ford products, manufactured complete in large volume, combine maximum quality with the lowest possible cost. Ford men mine ore and coal from Ford mines, and hew virgin timber from Ford forests. They melt, mold, shape and machine these raw materials into parts for motor cars, trucks and tractors. They assemble the finished products and distribute them to buyers in every community of the world. The savings that result from such a revolutionary program of efficient economy, are passed on to the buyer. Thus Ford products are winning an ever-growing measure of public confidence and respect.
