

Tribute Is Paid to Buckingham

Place Can Never Be Filled, Says Civic Body's Resolution.

Members of the Greater Omaha committee, in meeting Friday, paid glowing tribute to the memory of Everett Buckingham.

J. E. Davidson, chairman of the meeting, read a resolution, eulogizing the leader and companion who died February 27.

The resolution as adopted by the committee is:

A giant has fallen in our midst. A voice powerful in counsel is silent. A leader of men and events has passed away and we, his associates and friends, are met to pay tribute to his memory.

Most of us have known him intimately for years. We have seen him at the golf grounds and the club house when the cares of life were cast aside and the boy in the man was at play.

We have met him at the home friends who heartily speak to heart's inmost secrets.

We have met with him in civic movements when the general welfare was our concern, and we have sat with him at the council table over matters of business when grave questions were at stake and the utmost powers of the man were put forth, and out of it all and everywhere he rises a splendid character worthy of all respect and admiration.

His presence radiated cheer and sunshine, and always he was an optimist.

We do not mean that hope led him always to look upon the bright side and to search for the silver lining of the clouds, but rather that he had a profound conviction that the sober judgment of mankind would go onward and upward and that the years to come would be and must be better than the years that had passed.

Through the ages an increasing purple runs and the thoughts of man are widened with the process of the suns.

He was thus a man of faith and the man of faith doubts not that a bounteous harvest will follow the seed time if the sower has done his work well.

It was certain from the beginning that he must succeed in business, for when he accepted employment he gave his utmost—great ability.

It was largely through his efforts in various positions that the Stock-Yards company has come to its present proud place as one of the financial and industrial institutions of this state so necessary to business and the general welfare.

He was in the forefront of almost every civic movement and was an active and leading figure in Ak-Sar-Ben, one of its board of governors from the beginning giving liberally of time and money to serve Omaha by bringing into our midst, in October each year, thousands to participate with us in that festival week.

No mere words can measure the loss to this city and state through his death.

His vacant chair will never be filled. Others may take his place at the head of business institutions and of this board and in civic movements.

Their work, however, and service will be different, for Everett Buckingham made a place of his own which no other can fill.

The world has been made richer and better because of his life. His work and memory is his inheritance to us.

When he died he was respected and honored and loved by all. Enemies he had none.

His vacant chair will never be filled. Others may take his place at the head of business institutions and of this board and in civic movements.

McIntyre and Heath, Veteran Comedians, First Played Omaha in 1874 With Anderson's Circus; Next Here in 1880

Blackface Artist Says He Has Worn Same Stage Shoes 45 Years.

By EDWARD BLACK.

James McIntyre of the vaudeville team of McIntyre and Heath sat in his dressing room at the Orpheum the other afternoon, his face masked with a covering of burnt cork and wearing the habiliments of his act.

"I have worn these same stage shoes for 45 years," the famous minstrel said. "Many years ago Charles Evans of the team of Evans and Hoey traded shoes with me. Do you remember Evans and Hoey in their 'Parlor Match'?"

McIntyre told how he and Heath met in San Antonio in 1874 and have been together ever since.

"Before I went to San Antonio I had a partner whose name was Butler and who became involved in some difficulty at Memphis," McIntyre said. "I got off the train outside of Memphis to advise Butler that a detective was after him. When I reached San Antonio my clothes were covered with mud and I was a sorry looking spectacle."

90 Miles From Railroad.

"At that time San Antonio was 90 miles from a railroad and had a population of about 4,000. There were many gamblers, cattlemen and Mexicans there. A man named Harris opened in San Antonio the first theater to have the name of 'vaudeville' displayed on a sign. I was an Irish lad of 17 then and I had some nice stage clothes. I asked the management to give me a chance to show what I could do. The best clog dancer at that time was Steve Rogers and I was next to Rogers."

"They paid me $25 a week. After the show we went to a fandango and my partner, Butler, had the only silk top hat in the town. At the fandango Sam Bass and Joe Fowler shot Butler's silk hat off and frightened him speechless. A team of Howard and Heath came down from Chicago, and that is how I met Heath. We just were drawn to each other and have stuck together ever since."

Big Gambling House.

In the old days of San Antonio, McIntyre stated he saw a cattleman lose $75,000 in gold in one night at a gambling house. Mitchell's gambling house, he related, had 150 tables. He told about "Big Foot Wallace," picturesque trapper and hunter in Texas 50 years ago. Wallace was a giant and was the most feared of all white men by the Indians. McIntyre and Heath first appeared in Omaha as a team in 1874 with Anderson's circus. In 1880 they rehearsed their second minstrel show here at the old Academy of Music on Douglas street and were playing at the time in the St. Elmo theater. Some of the old songs heard in their early minstrel show were "Climbing Up the Golden Stairs," "You'll Never Miss the Water Until the Well Runs Dry," "Empty Is the Cradle, Baby's Gone," and "White Wings."

"We can remember Omaha before there were any pavements," McIntyre reminisced. "For a time the old Metropolitan was the leading hostelry, and then came the Canfield, next the Millard, and later the Paxton."

McIntyre attended school in Kenosha, Wis., with the late Judge J. P. English. Heath is a native of Philadelphia.

There are only a few stage teams today who were entertaining when McIntyre and Heath started out together 45 years ago.

Rum Sleuths "Gum Shoe" at Federal Building; Practice "Swooping Down"

Quietly, ever so quietly, Robert Samardick and two of his mulehounds tiptoed down the corridor of the federal building.

They stopped at the door of the prohibition office, which was closed. "Bob" put a finger to his lips.

"Sssh!" he sashed. "Sssh!" sashed back his two aides. Then "Bob" flung open the door. "Sic 'em!" he yelled to his "hounds."

The two agents went through the door in a bound and sprang over the railing inside the office with the perfect form of a champion hurdler. They landed simultaneously on a man inside, and throttled him.

"Bob" stood in the doorway, grinning. "Fine!" he said. "Fine! Now let's go back and do it again."

Fools Bootleggers. They did, time after time. It's a new game, similar to the annual "war game" of the United States navy.

"Just a new way to fool bootleggers," said Samardick to an alienist who thought he had found a new case for the sanity commission.

How it Works. "When we raid a place now I throw open the door and two of the crack jumpers make one leap through the door, another over the bar, and nab the bartender before he knows we've left the federal building. Then we can hunt for the liquor at leisure. It's a perfect plan."

The jumping sleuths have received their training exclusively on the railing in the prohibition office in the federal building. The deep dents in the hardwood floor, about the shape of a human head, indicate the hardships which they underwent in the cause of prohibition.

102 NEW CITIZENS GIVEN WELCOME. A confidence in the future of the country, based on "what immigrants have done in the way of introducing foreign ideas, foreign culture, arts, languages and science" was expressed by District Judge W. G. Hastings in his talk welcoming 102 men and women into United States citizenship.

An elaborate program was held in the courthouse Friday evening for these new citizens. It was opened with a procession led by Boy Scouts, followed by a oath of allegiance and salute to the flag and music by the Central High school orchestra. Mayor Dahlgren spoke as did District Judge Goss, who was formerly in charge of the naturalization court.

In his talk on "Our Immigration Policy and Its Success," Judge Hastings advised the immigrant to "keep alive his associations with his native land for cultural purposes to the full extent he can do so without interfering with the practical needs of his existence."

The program was arranged by the Americanization committee of which S. R. Elson is executive secretary.

RABBI TALKS ON NEEDS OF OMAHA. "Community spirit is our big need in Omaha," said Rabbi Frederick Cohn in a sermon on "Know Omaha and the World's Greatest Need," at Temple Israel last night.

The community chest failed of its full purpose because many withheld gifts because they didn't like some of the objects to which the money goes. This spirit is decreasing, I believe.

Blast Wrecks Ziegman Home

Police Start Query of Explosion in Sportsman's Apartment.

Explosion and fire completely wrecked the home of Sam Ziegman, 2712 Jackson street, about 12 last night.

Mr. Ziegman is in Hot Springs, Ark., with his wife. They left for there last Monday.

The explosion occurred under a front stairway and was followed by fire which gutted the first floor of the home before it was extinguished by the fire department.

Police Detective Al Nelson has been assigned to the case to investigate the cause of the explosion.

Ziegman is part owner of Baseball Headquarters and well known in sport circles.

His home is the west side of a duplex. The east side is occupied by the owner, B. Rosenthal.

"We had been out," said Mrs. Rosenthal. "Soon after we returned I heard what sounded like the rumble of thunder and then a sound that I thought was rain and the next we knew the fire department was here."

All the windows in the Ziegman home were blown out by the explosion and several windows were broken in the house next door, occupied by F. H. Gearhart, who turned in the fire alarm.

Insurance inspectors are at a loss to know how the explosion may have occurred.

E. E. Hayduk, deputy state fire warden, and John T. Dunn, fire inspector, investigated the fire.

A neighbor said she saw a man go to the house about 11 Friday night. Hayduk said there seemed to be evidence of kerosene on rugs and walls.
