

Social Slump While Omaha Convalesces

"Such dull times. All my friends are either in the hospital, on their way there or convalescing at home," said one young matron this morning to the social scribe.

In almost every set someone is ill. Mrs. Foye Porter has just returned to her home following an operation for appendicitis. Mrs. Charles McLaughlin and Mrs. Russell Best are also on the "getting better, but not able to be out" list.

Mrs. Charles Morton and Mrs. W. D. McHugh are just recovering from the grippe, and are curtailing their social activities.

Mrs. C. A. Goss is convalescent at the Methodist hospital following an operation performed on Tuesday.

Mrs. Floyd Smith, jr., who is visiting her father, E. Norman Bayne, in New York City, underwent an operation for appendicitis last week in the Lexington hospital.

Parking With Peggy

The average girl doesn't need a course in auto mechanics to know that the best thing to do with a flat tire is to give him the air.

Little Snow-White

THE HAPPY ENDING.

This is the last part of the famous story of "Snow-White." Children who have cut out and saved the paper dolls now have the whole story of "Snow-White" in a set out. Next week there'll be another "cut-out" story, "The Queen of Hearts." Be sure to watch for it.

When the prince's followers were carrying the glass case with the dead Snow-White in it, they stumbled over a rock and jarred the case. As they did so, the piece of poisoned apple, which had stuck in Snow-White's throat, fell out and she came to life.

Full of joy, the prince asked her to be his wife, and the surprised Snow-White liked him so much that she agreed. So the prince took her home to the king, his father, and they had a wonderful wedding.

And the wicked, jealous queen? When the magic mirror told her that the beautiful Snow-White was alive and had married a king's son, she flew into a terrible rage, rushed out of her palace, and was never seen again.

So Snow-White and her prince lived happily ever after.

A Wife's Confessional by Adele Garrison

"Perhaps You Were Rivals Centuries Ago"—Lillian.

Generally, I do not consider myself a coward, but I gave a distinct sign of relief at Lillian's ultimatum that I was not to share the nursing of her protegee unless someone else were in the room. Besides my fear of the girl's maniacal strength, as I had experienced it during the ride home, I had an uncanny little feeling that in some way unknown to me the life of this mysterious wife and my own were linked unpleasantly. I felt a reluctance to minister to her, which astonished me, for my usual impulse in cases of illness is to aid in any way I can.

Yet I was certain that never had I seen the girl before the minute when Lillian led her from the transcontinental train. . . I looked up to find my friend's eyes fixed upon me quizzically.

"Perhaps you were deadly rivals for a man's love centuries ago," she said.

"Malign in It's Influence."

"What a bonfire you'd have made in Salem a while back!" I retorted, foolishly irritated by her ability to read my thoughts. I ought to be used to her psychic powers by this time, for I surely have seen them exhibited frequently enough; but I hardly knew myself this morning, so captious was my mood. I felt as though from the temporarily twisted

"She Saw the Sedan Again."

"I think she saw the sedan again," I said quietly.

Lillian wheeled quickly. "Where?" she demanded.

"Just as we turned in the gate," I returned. "She saw something, for she turned her head quickly and gazed down the road as the car turned. But when I asked her about it, she said with very pretty embarrassment that she could tell nothing just then, for you had asked her to say nothing until you questioned her. Having heard that injunction laid upon her by you when the sedan passed us, I put two and two together."

"And I hope they make four," Lillian finished a bit impatiently. "I'm sort of interested in that sedan, its occupants were altogether too interested in us."

We had reached the lower floor of the farmhouse as we finished, and from the veranda came the sound of running feet, the short pattering footsteps of Junior, and Marion's longer stride.

"They've seen us," Lillian said with a smile, and we stood together while the children fairly flung themselves upon us.

"Oh, Mama!" Junior was so excited that he was hardly intelligible. "I rode on Lady, and Lady galloped, and I stayed on a awful long time, and Jerry says I ride like a circus man and oh! Ma-ma we rode down near the hedge and we saw my nice Lee Chow!"

Your Problems Solved by Martha Allen

Dear Martha Allen: When crossed in the slightest degree my husband has a most violent temper, almost reaching the point of insanity, ripping, tearing, smashing anything in sight. He is well educated and a member of an influential family, and holds a fairly good position with possible advancement in the future. He has none of the faults which would ordinarily cause trouble in a home. This very violent temper has made me unhappy. How would you advise me to deal with this problem? We have been married three years.

I THANK YOU.

You will have to handle your husband as you would a spoiled child and do for him what his parents failed to do. Use as much tact as possible to avoid "explosions," but when he is in the wrong in his demands firmly hold your own. Harden yourself to his outbursts, knowing that a demon has control of your lovable husband and that you mustn't blame him in the least. The less said about the matter after it is over, the better.

Mrs. J. B. W.: Service at the table is always given from the left of the person served.

M. L.: Send me your address again and I will forward the information you wish.

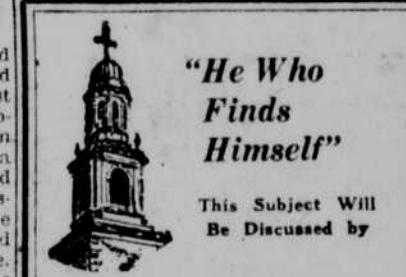

Dorothy: I think it all right for you to go to your school affairs. If your parents object, they must have some good reason. What is it?

Catherine: Be patient. If he loves you he will tell you so.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have.

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician.

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, yellow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results. Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit, lusc and soft.

HELPED THROUGH CHANGE OF LIFE

Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during this Critical Time

Baltimore, Md.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help me through the Change of Life and for a broken-down system. I had been complaining a long time and dragging along had tried other medicines which did not help me much. I read in the newspapers of the Vegetable Compound and after taking a bottle I felt better. I did not stop with one bottle, but took it through the whole critical time and am now practically a well woman. I have two daughters whose health was very bad before they married and I was worried about them. I got the Vegetable Compound for them and it helped them, and after they married it also helped them in bearing their babies. This is a great and good medicine for all complaints of women, and I recommend it to all."—Mrs. L. GINGRICH, 1376 N. Gilmore St., Baltimore, Maryland.

The Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine for women of middle age. Let it relieve you of nervousness, that feeling of strain and those annoying hot flashes so common at this time.
