

Operation Gives Vision to Blind

Cataracts Removed From Children's Eyes in Colorado Hospital.

Denver, March 14.—"I can see!" "I can see!" "Oh, isn't it beautiful and wonderful!" These were some of the expressions of childish joy that came from Viola Emore, 13, and Peter Morris, 15, following their first glimpse of the sunshine and beauties of nature as they left the new Colorado general hospital, after having been practically "stone blind" since birth.

The two children were members of a group of 11 brought here from the Colorado Home for the Blind at Colorado Springs, to be operated upon for congenital cataracts on their eyes.

Of the 11 children two were pronounced beyond human aid, surgeons declaring that the skin had grown entirely over their eyeballs so that there was no chance to form a "window" for vision.

The other nine were operated on with marked success.

The Emore and Morris children were restored to almost complete vision, while the other seven have been materially benefited, with every prospect that their eyesight will eventually become at least partially normal.

With the black curtain behind which they have groped since birth, torn away, and nature's glorious beauty revealed, the Emore girl and Morris boy were in ecstasies of joy as they rode through the park system of Denver in an open automobile.

And with the success of the operations upon this group of children from the blind home, the belief was expressed by those who performed the delicate surgery that many other inmates of the Colorado Springs institution will be given the light of day through similar operations.

Treaties Change World Business

American Commissioner Points to Effect of New Pact.

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 14.—New commercial treaties, the order of the day in the business world, are bringing about a radical change in trade practices and should be given careful study by exporters of the United States, according to Charles E. Lyon, American trade commissioner in London.

"The most favored national principle is advocated by some nations and deprecatd by others," Lyon said. "To the American manufacturer the outward effect of these treaties may be expressed in a changed requirement in respect of the commodity which he exports, and his representatives should keep him posted as to the net effect of proposed measures on the lines that bring him profits."

"Alterations in import and export license requirements are important factors," Lyon pointed out. "Tax laws are changing constantly, as the pressure to relieve the burden on a country's own people may be met by putting more pressure on the outside contributor."

"New food and drug laws are coming into being which would affect many important American medical preparations," Lyon continued. "Exchange throughout the world is definitely becoming more stable. The agent abroad has a far better opportunity to watch these events than the manufacturer at home."

Judge Reconciles Pair for Fifth Time

The fifth big reconciliation scene has been enacted by Mr. and Mrs. Resty Lamb of Benson.

Mrs. Lamb, 42, recently filed her fourth request for a divorce from her husband, a Benson furniture dealer. She has already obtained three divorces from him.

But each time, she told Judge Day, Mr. Lamb promised to improve, and each time they became reconciled.

"Nothing like trying it again," said Judge Day, when the unhappy couple appeared before him yesterday. "What seems to be the trouble with you people?"

It developed that Mrs. Lamb objected to Mr. Lamb's method of financing the Lamb household. She wanted to keep her money and accounts separated from his, and Judge Day advanced a method which seemed a solution to the problem.

"Well, now we haven't anything to quarrel about I suppose we don't need a divorce," quoth one of the Lambs. They left the court room the best of friends.

The Lambs were married the first time in 1903.
