

Old-Time "Bench" Is Resurrected

Judge Noble Institutes "Mourners' Seat" for Speeders; Sentences Five.

Judge Sophus Noble, Jr., in central police court Saturday morning, instituted the old-time "mourners' bench" for automobile speeders. Men before his tribunal on this charge were seated on the bench for half an hour of meditation and then were called before the court.

E. A. Jones, 2430 South Twentieth avenue, after pondering for 30 minutes, told the judge he has a wife and child, has worked up from truck driver to salesman for Swift & Co., and feared a jail sentence might lose his job for him. The judge sent him to jail till 1 in the afternoon.

"If you put me in the jug, I'll probably lose my job and be back here again as a vagrant, like some of these I've seen this morning," said Fred Duda, 1410 South Eleventh street, a taxicab driver, who said he was hurrying to pick up a fare ahead of another driver. The judge put him in till 5 p. m.

C. Peterson, 2563 Ames avenue, a widower, said he didn't know what would become of his five small children if he were sent to jail. His was a three-hour sentence.

"I was in once before and don't want any more of it," was the defense of Howard H. Roth, 4529 North Thirty-seventh street.

"Three hours," said Judge Noble. E. M. Braun, 2402 Cass street, and Henry Weiss, Council Bluffs, drew "heavy" sentences, extending till 5 p. m.

"These were not your first offenses as you say," declared Judge Noble in a lecture. "They were just first times you were caught."

EVILS OF FEAR AND WORRY DESCRIBED

Fear and worry, described as the one snake or devil which drove happiness out of the Garden of Eden, thicken the blood and pour poison into the secretions, weakening physical health, Dr. Stanley L. Krebs declared in an address last night in the ball room of the Fontenelle hotel.

Dr. Krebs, of New York, lectured on "Seven Devils, One or None."

"In the Gates laboratory at Washington," said Dr. Krebs, "we have a machine which can very nearly register human feeling and emotion. We have no 'emotive bottle' as some sensational writers declared some years ago but we do register the intensity of affection, passion and impulse."

Touching on fear and worry and its resultant ill affect on health, he declared the cure has been discovered in the relation of mind to matter which has been investigated "with almost romantic interest by psychological science in these later years."

Dr. Krebs will lecture again Monday night on "The Moods and Mysteries of Human Nature and How to Understand and Handle Them."

ROTARIANS WILL ATTEND SERVICES

At the First-Central Congregational church Sunday morning, Dr. Frank G. Smith, pastor, will speak on "A Rotarian Who Knew His Stuff." Dr. Smith is the ministerial representative in the local Rotary club and, once a year, on his invitation, the members of the club attend the morning service of worship. They have been invited to be present Sunday morning to hear the discussion of this theme. It will be a continuation of the series of human interest stories that have been presented the last few weeks in the morning service.

In the evening, Dr. Smith will present the eighth subject in the Sunday evening forum series. The theme will be, "What Has Been the Effect of Modern Scientific Research and Inquiry Upon Vital Religious Faith?" An invitation is extended to all who are not worshipping elsewhere to attend both of these services.

Dr. A. S. Pinto Once Shot Off Head of Filipino to Save Commander

DR. A. S. PINTO.

The story of how Health Commissioner A. S. Pinto shot the head from a Filipino nearly 25 years ago is being given first publicity in Omaha. The doctor believes that this was the most thrilling moment of his life. While serving as a contract surgeon with the United States army in Cuba, he allowed himself to be bitten by yellow fever mosquitoes in the interest of science, but he avers that experience was not comparable to the one in the Philippines. He has even served as a judge at a baby show and faced scores of disappointed mothers.

He was in the Philippines at the time when Aguinaldo was challenging Uncle Sam. He was with a volunteer outfit attached to the First infantry, holding the rank of captain and sharing the fate of a fighting man as well as administering his services as a surgeon.

Surprise Native Leader. Lieut. Col. G. L. Townsend and Pinto on an eventful day were in command of a company which had been detailed to skirmish around the town of Hermann, on the island of Samar. The men had been undergoing difficulties and hardships incident to the campaign in the Philippines and were on the lookout for treacherous natives.

Townsend surprised a native leader, Pinto was a few steps behind Townsend. The native displayed a dagger and was preparing to disembowel Townsend, according to the most approved custom of the islands. Pinto observed the situation, raised his gun and sent a charge into the native's head, taking off the top.

The native and Townsend fell together. The dagger was found impaled in the left forearm of Townsend. Dr. Pinto gave his commander first aid and then took charge of the company. The injured officer was carried back to Hermann.

Townsend Remembers. A few years ago the town of Calhoun, about 15 miles north of Omaha, celebrated the 100th anniversary of the establishment of Fort Atkinson on a site near the present location of Calhoun. Colonel Townsend attended the event.

To one of the sons of Dr. Pinto, Colonel Townsend said: "If it had not been for your father's quickness while we were in the Philippines I would not be here today."

Dr. Pinto recalled the incident as follows: "We had left our station at Pamubuhan and were marching north to connect with a column that was to form a junction with us at the town of Hermann. When within half a mile where there was high cogon grass and scrubby cocconut grove, the enemy closed in on us from each side.

"The men were hastily formed back to back and fought the enemy from mile of the town and going down a both sides. Lieutenant Townsend and I were walking close together. He stepped out of the trail to investigate a suspicious looking trap when one of the enemy hurled himself on Townsend with a drawn dagger.

The native's intention was to disembowel him. I was at his side with my gun drawn and cocked. I took in the situation and shot the native at the corner of the right eye and raised off the top of his head like a teapot.

Heroes of Fight. He and Townsend fell and in falling, the native's dagger passed through Townsend's forearm. I lifted the dead body from Townsend and gave him hurried first aid. Then I took charge of the column, being the only other commissioned officer with the command. We drove off the enemy with heavy loss to them and proceeded to Hermann where we met the other column and fortified ourselves in the church, and there spent the night.

"One particular item of daring was performed by two soldiers who composed a point of our column. They mounted a parapet made from cocconut logs and stones, and while the enemy were whacking at their feet with bolos and daggers, accounted for 14 of them around the parapet. This fight took place on a Sunday morning about 10:30."

An official account of this fight and of the saving of Townsend's life appears on the reports of the War department at Washington.

TORNADO FILM COMING HERE

Harry Watts, manager of the Rialto theater, was advised Friday that a special film of the Illinois tornado disaster was being shipped to him from Chicago. The pictures of the Illinois tornado will be added to the Kinograms news reel, which is a regular feature of the Rialto program, Mr. Watts said.

Shepherd Fails to Enter Plea

Hearing on Indictment Delayed Till Monday.

By International News Service. Chicago, March 21.—The arraignment of William D. Shepherd and Dr. Charles C. Falman on the indictment charging them with murder for the death of William Nelson McClintock was adjourned until Monday shortly after noon today.

No pleas were entered and no definite action taken. Only one witness, Falman, was placed on the stand. Nearly an hour before the time scheduled for the arraignment, the courtroom was crowded with spectators, jostling and fighting each other for points of vantage.

The state was represented by a small army of attorneys, who sat in conference as the defense began its argument for dismissal of the charges. It was a disappointment to the greatest aggregation of courtroom spectators which has assembled here since the Leopold-Loeb trial.

A few tilts between the defense attorneys and the assemblage of counsel for the state and the monotonous outline of the defense argument by Attorney William S. Stewart was all that rewarded them for their hours of waiting and fighting for places of vantage in the courtroom.
