

Clean-Up Campaign Planned for City

Members of the junior division of the Chamber of Commerce Friday pledged their support to the "cleaner Omaha" campaign which is to be carried on throughout the year by the young men's organization of the chamber. Discussion of the plans for the campaign followed an entertainment program of music and boxing bouts at a smoker held at the chamber. One hundred and twenty men attended.

In carrying on the cleanup campaign, Frank L. Campbell, Jr., general chairman, announced that the city had been divided into zones with a team captain in charge of each zone. Members of the teams will include the majority of the 300 junior division members. A survey of each zone will be made by the teams and the cooperation of the property owners will be sought to clean up rubbish and beautify the city.

The division has received the sanction of the city officials in the campaign and promise of official assistance where necessary to carry on the work. Constant vigil will be maintained throughout the year by the campaign workers in their zones to keep Omaha as nearly spotless as possible.

Airedale Dog Refuses to Quit Humane Society Shelter

Since Rex, pedigreed Airedale dog of Lawrence Roberts, 3006 Dodge street, has tasted the food at the Nebraska Humane society shelter, he can't forget it. Rex was taken to the dog shelter three weeks ago for not having a tag on his collar. His master bought a tag for him in a few days and he was returned to his home. But Rex seems to think he gets more attention at the shelter so returns for a daily visit, even on Sundays. The dog is given the two meals a day that all the other dogs at the shelter get, consisting of dog biscuits at 9 a. m. and beef stew, carrots and onions at 4 p. m. "Rex is a regular visitor," said Owen Winchell, superintendent of the shelter. "One night he awoke me at 11 p. m. and I tried to discourage him by not feeding him, but it was of no use. He still returned daily." It has been necessary to put a metal plate on the front door of the building because dogs paw and bite at the wood to get in, according to Superintendent Winchell. "I guess we'll have to tie Rex at home," said Mrs. L. B. Roberts, mother of Lawrence. "Rex is about 5 years old, but has only lived in Omaha for a year and a half. He has not had as much attention as he received when we lived in Arlington, Neb. In Arlington he walked downtown with my son every morning, but here he must remain at home." Rex often sleeps in the garage at the shelter. He is the only dog allowed to roam around the building, the others being kept in separate pens.

Money Granted for Road Fund

Measure Provides 70 Per Cent of Funds Received Go to Commissioners.

Lincoln, March 20.—The senate committee on roads and bridges compromised today with those urging more money for secondary roads and an amendment by Willis of Richwood was accepted which gives counties 70 per cent of the auto license fees for use on secondary, or county roads.

The house bill as passed by that body, only 50 per cent of the auto license money could be used on county roads.

This compromise will give counties approximately $4,500,000 in the next biennium for either maintenance or building of their secondary roads, according to a statement issued by Roy Cochran, state engineer. This sum is equivalent to the amount demanded by counties from the gasoline tax, according to Cochran.

The remaining 30 per cent of auto license money will be used by the state in maintenance of state roads and the gas tax bill was amended so the state may use part of the gasoline tax for maintenance. Cochran stated it was probable the 30 per cent would not be sufficient for maintenance. With these amendments attached the auto license and gas tax bills will be trotted out on general file tomorrow.

The county treasurers under the auto license bill amendment will send 30 per cent of their auto license money to the state treasurer. The remainder will be turned over to the county commissioners of their respective counties for county road building and maintenance.

In the morning the senate again refused to accept a house bill in its entirety and after a sharp fight laymen members of the senate plus a few attorneys succeeded in changing the supreme court commission bill. The bill as passed by the house places appointive power in the hands of the supreme court. The amendment states that the governor shall appoint "with approval of the supreme court."

There are six commissioners to be appointed immediately after the bill is passed and is signed by the governor.

Blair (Neb.) Couple Wed 50 Years

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Taylor

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Taylor of Blair, Neb., celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Monday at their home. No arrangements to receive a large number of their friends were made by them, so they kept open house all day. A marriage certificate was made up and signed by each caller.

This couple was married at Degaff, O., March 16, 1875. They began housekeeping there and remained until 1878, when they moved to Blair, where they have resided since.

Mr. Taylor and his brother, Henry, drove one horse to a light road wagon from their Ohio home to Blair, the trip taking 30 days. Mrs. Taylor with her husband's family came by rail, arriving in Blair in August of that year. Mr. Taylor taught school on the Burt county bottom, 14 miles north of Blair, that fall and winter and walked home on Friday evenings and back again Monday morning. He received $37.50 per month.

After the first year or two in Nebraska, Mr. Taylor followed the trade of painter and decorator. He was efficient at anything he undertook. Fourteen children were born to them, 11 of whom grew to man and womanhood. The living children are as follows: Mrs. G. A. Smith, Mrs. D. S. Fletcher and Max W. Taylor, all of Whittier, Cal.; H. Byron Taylor of Los Angeles; E. B. Taylor of Oakland, Cal.; Fred J. Taylor, Mrs. J. Harold Stewart and Mrs. Arlene Reeves of Blair; and Carlton S. and Paul C. Taylor of Omaha and Ivan Taylor. They have not heard from Ivan since his embarkment with the expeditionary forces in 1917.

In 1882, Mr. Taylor joined Blair lodge No. 14, I. O. O. F., and later both he and his wife became members of Welcome Rebecca lodge of Blair. Their oldest son, Fred J. Taylor, served in the United States navy from 1901 to 1906. Five of their sons served their country in the great world war, as follows: E. B., Carlton S., Paul, E. Byron and Ivan.

Mrs. Taylor is a charter member of the American Legion auxiliary of Blair, and the Omaha chapter of American War Mothers voted her an honorary membership.
