

A Wife's Confessional

The Trick Which Jerry Tiger Plays on Madge

My promise to Lillian that I would return and take a nap while she slept was one that I deemed far better broken than kept, I was too excited to be sleepy, but I knew she was so fatigued that in all probability she was already asleep. My going back into the room would only waken her so I decided to stay outdoors with the children when I should have found them.

When I first stepped into the doorway, however, there was no trace of them to be seen. I gazed searchingly around lawn and garden, barnyard and orchard, then lifted my eyes to the distant hill slope, which is the farmer's first charm. Just emerging from the cedars which top it came the little procession for which I was watching. With the thrill at my heart which the sight of my small son's happiness always brings me I began to walk swiftly toward the hill. I met them half way, so slow and sedate was the progress of "Lady" the old and decrepit horse beloved as much by Marlon and Junior as by her owner, Jerry Tiger.

Jerry, hired by Lillian to give the children an afternoon of horseback riding, had the pride of his office in every line of his figure as he walked at "Lady's" head holding her bit that she might not stumble unwarily and unseat Junior. My man-child sitting stiffly erect with his small heels drumming "Lady's" sides and his arms rigidly holding the bridle reins was the most adorable figure imaginable to my perceptions at least. Marlon trudged by "Lady's" side close to Junior, her eyes watching him so closely that frequently she stumbled upon the uneven path, though always righting herself with the ability of children to keep their feet under conditions that would send an adult sprawling.

The Exuberance of Childhood. When I met them I turned and fell into place beside Marlon, slipping my hand beneath her elbow to insure her remaining on her feet. She raised a shining face to mine. "Oh, Auntie Madge!" she gurgled. "There never was such a good time as we have had. Do you know I knelt down on 'Lady's' back and rode, and Jerry says I ought to be able to stand up on her back pretty soon."

"I can stand up on her back now," Junior piped up, excitedly. "Want to see me?" He drew one plump foot upward while I darted behind Marlon and seized him. At the same moment Jerry stopped the horse abruptly. "Jerry," I said sharply, for my small lad's sudden movement had frightened me, "what have you been teaching these children? These things are dangerous." Mrs. Underwood would never permit—"Don't get excited, Miss Graham," Jerry advised advised with the unconscious impudence of his type. "I ain't let the kids do nuthin' dangerous. I always hold on to Junior when he stands up on 'Lady.' He's safer than he is sitting down while Marlon there don't need nobody. She can keep her balance anywhere. Besides 'Lady,' she's just as steady as a rock. Look at her broad back. You couldn't fall off her if you tried. I tell you what Miss Graham, why

COLOR CUT-OUTS Three Spinners

A NEW GOWN

This is the second day's chapter of the famous fairy tale "The Three Spinners." Children who follow the story and cut out the pictures every day will have a complete set of "The Three Spinners" dolls.

The mother of the lazy girl, about whom you read yesterday, worked hard and made a pretty dress for her. It was becoming and the girl knew that she looked beautiful in it. After this she was lazier than ever.

But one day the mother completely lost patience with her lazy daughter and gave her a good beating. The girl was not too lazy to cry, and this she did so loudly that she could be heard out in the street. "Now, will you work?" asked the mother, but the lazy girl only cried the louder.

(This is the pretty dress that the mother spun and dyed for her ungrateful daughter. Color it a soft shade of tan with red dots and make the cap of tan. Cut along the dotted lines for the girl's face to show through. Save the dress for this is what the girl will want to wear when something exciting happens to her in tomorrow's story.)

don't you try her yourself? Then you'll see how easy she sets, just like a rocking chair."

There was a gleam in his eyes which should have warned me, but the children gleefully and enthusiastically accepting his proposal, took my attention from him. I was surprised to find how strong was my own inclination to accept his ridiculous offer. To ride horseback gracefully always has been an unfulfilled ambition which my pecuniary commonsense has prevented my gratifying. But I never have forgotten the happiness of one summer of my childhood spent on a farm where there was a horse which I was permitted to ride. Marlon's glowing face brought back to me a vivid memory of that glorious time, and with a sudden irresponsible impulse I lifted Junior from the saddle. Then with a sobering second thought I looked around warily.

"Where is your father?" I asked, remembering the elder Tiger's appetite for gossip. "Gone over to our place with Jim," Jerry responded evidently reading my thoughts. "Jim's going to help him mend some harness, and he won't be back for an hour. If you'll just come down this way a bit, there is a big stump that you kin use to get on his back."

"Managed to Get on Horse." With the years of discretion suddenly gone glimmering I followed "Lady" to the stump, and despite my awkwardness managed, flounderingly with Jerry's help to get on the horse's back. I remembered enough of my childhood training to enable me to guide her without Jerry's protecting hand upon the bit. Up the hill and back again and around the orchard I rode, shutting my mental eyes to the ludicrous picture I knew I was making and enjoying every minute of the experience. When we came out upon the level grassy plot between the farmhouse and my beloved perennial garden I prepared to dismount. Then suddenly I clutched my reins tightly instead and gave a little scream of dismay.

For as Jerry sounded a few provocative notes upon a harmonica which he surreptitiously had lifted to his mouth, "Lady" suddenly whirled and circled around an imaginary track with mincing, dancing steps.

Your Problems Solved

by Martha Allen

Should Young Women Marry Old Men? A number of times I have expressed my opinion against the marriage of two persons between whom there is a big difference in age.

Often women write to me complaining because their husbands are old and settled while they crave the pleasures of youth. Here is a woman who believes that for happiness' sake the man should be older. Concerning advice I gave to a woman she says:

Dear Miss Allen: I married a man 20 years older than myself and have not regretted it once. I was only 24 when I married. We have been married five years and have the nicest little son 4 years old. I really believe that the man ought to be quite a little older than the woman. After a woman gets married and has her home duties and babies to care for she doesn't care for the same things that she called sport before marriage. I really enjoy a home man more than one that wants to go to this and that all the time. Although I don't want to stay home all the time and can enjoy myself when we do go away, I think many people go too much for their happiness. We have never disagreed on how we should spend our spare time. My belief is that a girl should marry the man she loves regardless of age. Marriage is based on love and where there is love there is contentment. MRS. J. J. I agree that the difference in age matters little where the man and the woman have similar interests and enthusiasms. But this is usually the case where couples are of about the same age.

Dot: There is no reason why you shouldn't be friends with both boys. You shouldn't be thinking of marrying either one.

Azealia: There is no cure for jealousy that I know of. Be considerate of the young man's feelings, but do not allow him to dominate you.

Miss Martha S.: That was a nice letter from you. I will forward it to A. S. M.

Gloriously Clear Teeth

Why you may already have them—and yet not realize it

Make this unique test. Find out what beauty is beneath the dingy film that clouds your teeth

DO you seriously want dazzlingly clear teeth?—teeth that add immeasurably to your personality and attractiveness?

You can have them, if you wish. That's been proved times without number. But not by continuing with old methods of cleansing and of brushing.

Modern science has discovered a new way. A radically different principle from old ways; and based on latest scientific findings. This offers you a test, free. Simply mail the coupon.

How to gain them—quickly
There's a film on your teeth. Run your tongue across your teeth and you can feel it. Remove it and the pretty teeth you envy in others. Ordinary methods won't successfully remove it.

That is why this test is offered. For when you remove that film, you'll be surprised at what you find. You may actually have beautiful teeth already—and yet not realize it. Find out!

What that film is Most tooth troubles now are traced to film. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays.

Germ by the millions breed in it. And they, with tartar are the chief cause of pyorrhea and decay.

That film, too absorbs stains . . . stains from food, from smoking, from various causes. And that is why your teeth look "off color."

New methods now remove it
Old-time dentifrices could not successfully fight that film. So most people had dingy teeth. And tooth troubles increased alarmingly.

It acts to curdle the film, then harmlessly to remove it. No soap, no chaff; no harsh grit dangerous to enamel.

It proves the folly of ugly teeth. It gives better protection against pyorrhea, of tooth troubles both in adults and in children.

Ten days' use will prove its benefits. And that 10 days is offered to you as a test. Why not make it then—have prettier teeth, whiter teeth? Send the coupon now.
