

Runaway Girl and Cousin Wed

"Rather Be at Her Funeral," Says Mother After Marriage to Foil Prosecution.

"I'd rather be at her funeral than see her getting married to him," declared Mrs. C. F. Hollinger just after her daughter, Caroline, 17, had been married to Robert Garm Dutch, 24, by County Judge Crawford Monday morning.

The girl, pretty in a brave attempt at wedding finery, said nothing, looking down at her wedding certificate. A week ago last Saturday she left her home, Forty-eighth and Harrison streets, saying she would return in a few minutes.

Confesses to Mother. She didn't return till Tuesday morning and then told a tale of having been married Saturday night to her distant cousin, Robert Garm Dutch, who lived with his sister, Mrs. Erma Peterson, at Sixty-first and T streets.

Later she admitted to her mother they had not been married and led South Omaha police to a deserted house at Sixty-sixth street and Lane cutoff, where she said she stayed Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

The groom, who has no job, anxiously consulted Marriage Clerk Stubben-dorf regarding the county judge's marriage fee and confessed that $1 was all he possessed. That is the exact amount of the fee.

"All Fixed Up." In the corridor after the ceremony the bride's mother denounced the groom and demanded that he accompany her to state that "all is fixed up." He refused to do this and she finally went upstairs while the bride party waited. When she returned she kissed her daughter and departed.

Leo Hollinger, brother of the bride and Mrs. Erma Peterson, sister of the groom, also witnessed the ceremony.

Howell Urged Query. The investigation into the doing of the local prohibition department, which is in progress at the request of Senator R. E. Howell, is being conducted by David Nolan, chief of the intelligence unit of the Eighth district, who arrived in Omaha Saturday.

Nolan and his chief assistant, J. M. Adams, kept details of their investigation under cover. They held a long meeting in the office of Prohibition Director Thomas Monday morning at the Federal building.

High and United States Attorney J. C. Kinsler were called into conference. High admitted he had been called and that he gave a statement on local conditions. Thomas refused to discuss the meeting, but admitted that an investigation is in progress.

"See You Tuesday." Nolan told The Omaha Bee the following: "I came to Omaha with Civil Service Examiner P. H. Clumpton to examine a couple of applicants for special agents' positions."

During fully 10 minutes while being asked questions, Nolan just smiled and said, "Are you going to be here Tuesday?"

When the reporter informed him he would, he said: "I will try and see you then."

Nolan refused to disclose any information he had revealed while working here.

During the conference Monday, Dean Ringer visited the office of Thomas and held a short conference outside the meeting room.

Nolan refused to discuss the progress of one of the agents—H. H. Lepper, who was here last week.

To all questions, Nolan smiled and said, "Will you be here Tuesday."

Her father, who is near by, carried her 2-year-old child out of danger, and threw blankets around the woman, smothering the fire.

The house and contents were destroyed.

Mrs. Robbins' husband was killed in an accident in a well near Syracuse about a year ago.

At the left of the picture are Profs. Kime and Gooding of the University of Nebraska. Prof. Kime holds a whip of hay.

"Hay is an extremely valuable crop if the grower knows how to grade his products," declared expert hay graders of the United States Department of Agriculture at inspection in Omaha Monday.

More than 50 hay growers and dealers met to receive information from the government representatives, W. A. Wheeler and E. C. Parker, Washington.

Inspection of hay in cartload lots was made on tracks north of the Missouri Pacific freight depot, followed by luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce featuring round table discussion of the hay business in Nebraska.

The purpose of the meeting, explained M. J. Hyland, Omaha hay dealer, is to acquaint dealers and shippers and growers of the relative value of grasses for hay. It is the first meeting of its kind in the state. Hay men will benefit by the meeting in being able to know hay values as the grain man does grain. Grain grading is also a comparatively new branch of education afforded growers.

Attending the meeting also were Professors Kime and Gooding of the University of Nebraska.

Muny Air Field Ordinance Filed

Councilmen Believe 300-Acre Site Cost Too Much at This Time.

Mayor Dahlman and the city commissioners will view a tract of 160 acres east of Carter Lake, proposed for use as a municipal air field.

An ordinance proposing acquisition of 300 acres north of Carter lake and extending to Florence lake was placed on file by city council committee of the whole Monday, because city officials believed the cost would be more than the city is warranted to spend at this time for the purpose.

City Commissioner J. E. Hummel favored the north east tract and stated that the proposed tract would require hoisting of cranes to pull airplanes out of the mud.

Ordinance to Be Offered. W. A. Ellis, assistant commissioner of the Chamber of Commerce, gave the committee of the whole a description of the tract east of Carter lake. An ordinance will be offered to city council Tuesday morning, proposing to acquire this tract.

"Omaha needs an air field," said Ellis. "The government is announcing prospective new air routes. Air express lines are coming. Omaha should not delay in establishing a municipal air field."

City Commissioner John Hopkins, in advocating the acquisition of the 160-acre tract east of Carter lake, stated that the city should acquire this land whether it was used for an air field or for another use. He stated that the land needs to be filled in and added that the city probably will fill it in from the lake anyway.

Site Visited Sunday. On Sunday Commissioner Hopkins, Brig. Gen. Alfred W. B. Bjornstad, Gould Dietz, Ellis and City Commissioner Dean Noyes visited the various sites suggested for a municipal air field.

Mayor Dahlman is convinced that Omaha must have a municipal air field. The present problem is to decide on a tract that will meet the requirements and for which the city can pay without waiting too long to start the project. Ellis stated that the east tract is large enough for aerial field purposes.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

By THORNTON W. BURGESS Who never puts his tongue to use for lack of knowledge.—Peter Rabbit.

Peter Puts his Tongue to Use Peter himself isn't likely to suffer from that complaint. Curiosity and a silent tongue seldom go together.

"What good is a tongue to one who doesn't use it?" demands Peter, and that is a hard question to answer.

So early one morning, as Mrs. Robin was looking for just the right kind of dry grass near where Peter was sitting, he began putting that tongue of his to use.

"Mrs. Robin," said he, "every time I see you I am surprised that you appear so neat and clean."

"For a minute Mrs. Robin forgot all about dry grass and nest building, her bright eyes snapped.

"I want to know what you mean, Peter Rabbit!" she cried indignantly. "Why shouldn't I appear neat and clean?"

"Why should you think I would be anything but neat and clean? Any one overhearing you might think that I have habits of untidiness. Explain yourself, Peter Rabbit!"

This Peter hastened to do. "I didn't mean to even hint that you were not neat and clean, Mrs. Robin. Indeed, I didn't," said he. "What I was thinking of was the way in which you shape your nest."

"Well, what about the way in which you shape my nest?" demanded Mrs. Robin. "What has that to do with keeping neat and clean?"

"Why you make the walls of that nest of mud, don't you?" Peter asked. "Certainly!" replied Mrs. Robin. "Certainly I make them of mud! I haven't been able to find anything else as good. But what has that to do with the subject?"

"Everything!" retorted Peter. "I wish you would explain to me how it is that when you are just leaving that nest and have had no time or place to clean your feathers, you never seem to be the least bit muddy. It always appears to be as clean and neat as if there were no such thing as mud. I don't see how you do it."

"For goodness sake Peter Rabbit, do talk sense!" exclaimed Mrs. Robin. "Just because I use mud in my nest there is no reason why I should daub myself all up with it. Why you should expect my breast to be soiled with mud is more than I can understand. I suppose you think it queer that my back isn't muddy too?"

"That is silly," declared Peter. "You don't use your back to work that mud into shape. Of course I don't expect your back to be muddy."

"And I don't use my breast to work that mud into shape, either," retorted Mrs. Robin.

Peter sat erect and stared very hard at Mrs. Robin. "Now what is the use of being untruthful?" he demanded.

"Who says I'm untruthful? Who says I'm untruthful, Peter Rabbit?" My, how the bright eyes of Mrs. Robin snapped and how very angry she looked!

"Didn't you say that you don't use your breast in working that mud in your nest into shape?" demanded Peter.

"I said just that. What of it?" replied Mrs. Robin.

"I've seen you a dozen times shaping that nest with your breast," declared Peter.

"If I've seen you once!" mumbled Mrs. Robin. "Well, let me tell you, Peter Rabbit, you haven't seen me once doing anything of the kind. You haven't seen me, because I don't do it. Now what have you to say?"

Peter was so surprised that he began to swallow three times. Then he could find his tongue. Then he certainly did put it to use.
