Ford's First Air Route.
Lamont Studies Italy.
You Can't Judge Youth.
Balfour Escaped.
By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

Henry Ford has started his first regular flying machine route. The first all-metal monoplane of the air route arrived from Dearborn in Chicago yesterday, making the trip in 2 hours, 49 minutes. Having built that one, you can rely on Henry Ford and his son to build 10,000 more.

Those 10,000 airplanes will wake up capital, including capital invested in railroads. The American airship problem will be solved and the country will have protection it needs.

Postmaster General New announces that all but foreigners will be encouraged to organize flying machine routes and allowed to carry mail under government contracts, as railroads carry it. That is excellent news. Both the postmaster general and President Coolidge are to be congratulated on their effort to establish real flying in the United States.

Flying machines owned by aliens will be barred by the postoffice authorities, as we bar alien ships in coastwise trade.

Thomas W. Lamont of Morgan & Co., now in Rome, is said to have discussed with Mussolini a considerable loan to be floated by the Italian government here. Dispatches say that Mr. Lamont is investigating "the prospect of Italy's economic future."

Being a very intelligent citizen, Mr. Lamont will have no difficulty in estimating the future of Italy. She has millions of the world's best workers, from men that work faithfully on the land, and in factories to a genius such as Marconi in science, or a man of power in government like Mussolini.

For 2,000 years and much longer the Italian race has demonstrated its power. Venice, one Italian city, built on a marsh, ruled the commerce of the world. From Rome all the kings and emperors have taken their orders at one time or another. Italy produces power of all kinds, Columbus, the navigator; Gallileo, celestial genius; Michel Angelo, greatest artist, sculptor and architect that ever lived; Leonardo da Vinci, next to Michel Angelo in art, and beyond him in science; Caesar, in war incomparable; Dante—you can't well predict future failure based on such a past.

If Mr. Lamont wants to know whether such a country as Italy deserves a loan, his answer is yes, and it ought to be a loan on fair terms with no usurious 7 per cent clause in it. We ought to make a decent, just loan to the country that discovered us.

In Chicago Robert Preston, only 21, jumps to his death in the lake. First he shot himself, and all because "life was a failure." The probability is that he was entirely mistaken.

A little more patience and courage might have brought him real success. Some of the ablest men, and most successful, have contemplated suicide at one time or another. No man can say he is a failure until death comes and gets him, and even then he can't be sure.

Dying on the island of St. Helena, Napoleon said that if he had not been beaten at Waterloo, if he had had the good fortune to die in Russia, he would have been called one of the world's greatest generals and a great success.

He thought he was a failure, because he was a prisoner of England. Now everybody knows that he was the world's greatest general and a most extraordinary genius in the accomplishment of his desires.

Chicago is trying to select among her boys one that can hope to be the most useful citizen of 1950. Such a selection is impossible. The boy with the best brain in Chicago may seem the dullest, least promising today.

Newton, the greatest mathematical mind ever born on earth, was called dull, when as a mere child he was working out mathematical problems that would have puzzled his teachers.

Gibbon, before he wrote his great history of Rome, was considered a gluttonous, unpromising, semi-military person.

Washington, as a young man, after he had undertaken important tasks, declared himself a failure. Demosthenes, greatest of orators, stuttered and stammered as a youth.

Lord Balfour is out of Damascus, and safely on his way home. He narrowly escaped the attack of an Arab mob of 6,000 gathered to besiege his hotel, and was saved by the prompt action of a French general.

The noble lord is hated by the Arabs, because they believe he gave authority in Jerusalem back to the Jews.

The strange thing, hard to understand, is that in Jerusalem, the orthodox Jews boycotted Balfour and would have nothing to do with him, closing their shops when he arrived, as a sign of contempt. They hate him, as do the Arabs.

Those well informed say that the very old-fashioned "orthodox Jewish community believe" that Jerusalem should be reserved for praying, repentance and preparation for death. They object to the energetic modern Jews, from America and elsewhere, seeking to establish industries, wipe out malaria, restore fertility by irrigation, and generally put the country on a paying basis.
