Strayed or Stolen. On Wednesday the 25th of March from the premises, the person of Mrs. H—the great Northwestern poetess. She was last seen at Traders Point with something—bearing a striking resemblance to a bedquilt—under her arm. All information as to the whereabouts of said personage will be thankfully received at this office.

The First Boat of the Season. On Saturday morning the 25th of March, that staunch Steamer, the St. Marys, arrived at our Levee, with a considerable quantity of freight for our Merchants, and also several passengers. She bears off the palm as the first boat of the season; and her officers deserve a good deal of credit for their enterprise and promptness in bringing her through so soon after the ice had left. After discharging her freight, the St. Marys went up as far as Council Bluffs and Omaha. We understand that she was detained several hours on the sand-bar, between the lower Council Bluffs landing and Omaha. That sandbar is the dread of the navigators of our river, even in high water, and it is nearly impassable when the water is low. The steamer returned the next day, passing gaily down. Success to the St. Marys the first boat of the season!

The splendid Steamer Admiral arrived at our Wharf on Tuesday evening. She was heavily laden and crowded with passengers. As the Minne-haha departed from St. Louis the same day she may be expected here soon.

The Mayor of Omaha is out with a proposal for the building of a hotel in that town, and offering a premium, in city lots, to the adventurous individual who shall consent to sink his money in such a speculation. Really, matters must be in a bad way in Omaha, when the corporate authorities have to take the erection of private buildings in hand and offer rewards to such as will run the hazard. The Mayor does not say in his published proposals, by what authority he stakes lands legally dedicated to public use, for private purposes, but gravely offers to donate a part of a public square to whoever will build a hotel. Next we know, the corporate authorities will donate Capitol Hill to a Circus Company, and the basement walls of what was once intended for the Capitol to a Saloon keeper.

A celebrated dandy was one evening in company with a young lady, and, observing her kiss her favorite poodle, he advanced, and begging the like favor, remarked that she ought to have as much charity for him as she had shown to the dog. "Sir," said the belle, "I never kissed my dog when he was a puppy."

PAID IN HIS OWN COIN.—George the Third; talking to Hutton, the Moravian missionary, said: "Mr. Hutton, I am told that you Moravians do not select your own wives, but leave it to your ministers to choose for you—is it so?" "Yes, please your Majesty; marriages among the brethren are contracted, as your Majesty will perceive, after the fashion of Royalty."

Tying a mackerel to your ceat-tail, and imagining yourself a whale is one of the first lessons in codfish aristocracy.

Parody. We find the following parody upon McKay's "Tell me, ye winged winds," going the rounds: Tell me, ye winged winds, That round my pathway roar, Do ye not know some spot, Some lone and pleasant dell, Some "holier" in the ground, Where babies never yell, And cradles are not found?

The loud wind blew the snow into my face, And snickered as it answered—"Nary place." Tell me thou misty deep, Whose billows round me play, Knowest thou some favored spot, Some island far away, Where weary man may find A place to smoke in peace, Where crinoline is not, And hoops are out of place?

The loud waves, sounding a perpetual shout, Stopt for a while, and spluttered, "Yeon git out." Tell me, my secret soul— Oh! tell me, Hope and Faith, Is there no resting place For women, girls and death? Is there no happy spot Where bachelors are blessed; Where females never go, And man may dwell in peace? Faith, Hope, and Love—beat boons to mortal given— Waved their bright wings, and answered—"Yes, in Heaven!"

Long Sermons Again. Mr. Editor: Having read the very excellent, and judicious remarks of your highly esteemed correspondent "Observer," I am induced to make a few additional practical suggestions; and I avail myself of this method of expressing my views, that by means of your paper, which I think has a very general circulation in your large and growing city, I may reach all the clergy, whom I wish to benefit. The present may emphatically be styled the age of improvement, and so extensive have been the improvements, that already a very large number of persons are getting along without eating "their bread in the sweat of their brows." Yet it requires not a little head work to succeed; and when the mind has been wearied through much exertion for six successive days, ministers ought not to tax their patience to so great an extent as complained of. The mind must have rest, and 'tis useless to expect men to keep awake on the Sabbath who have been so busy during the week,—sometimes so busy as to be almost unconscious that the Sabbath has dawned. Ministers ought to be ashamed to punish their hearers for an hour, with dry remarks concerning personal holiness, or an interest in Christ. If they had music and dancing every few minutes the audience would not "lose the power of their under jaw," but that would be out of place on the Sabbath! Another reason for short sermons is that church members do not like to set a bad example before sinners, by nodding during service;—True, they might bow their head devoutly, and catch a short nap, but should they happen to snore, they would disturb their neighbors, and wound the feelings of well-minded Christians. Why cannot ministers learn to preach to suit public sentiment? They do so in some parts of the country, and it would be very agreeable to the flesh if all should adopt this plan. I would ask if this pertinacious adherence of ministers to old practices and former methods of worshipping God in face of "public sentiment," the great rule of modern life, is not the worst form of old fogyism!

Again Mr. Editor, is it right, for ministers, in addition to the imposition of long sermons on the Sabbath, to try to keep up a prayer meeting or week day evenings, when members and officers of the church cannot well spare the time to attend? Ought they not to have a better sense of propriety than to go against the tide of popular feeling? How can they expect to be useful if they consult duty instead of expedience, or the welfare of the soul at the expense of one ease?

But I must not do, what I condemn,—be tedious. I am a friend to ministers though I thus write, and would suggest, that your correspondent "Observer" frequently furnish us with his meditations, or dreams. Every little helps. Respectfully yours, NOT ASLEEP.

The pleasure of doing good is a pleasure that never wears out. The pleasure of being good is another of the same sort.
