POETRY.

Better Late than Never.
Life is a race where some succeed, While others are beginning;
'Tis luck at times, at others speed, That gives an early winning;—
But if you chance to fall behind, Ne'er slacken your endeavor; Just keep this wholesome truth in mind:
'Tis better late, than never.

If you can keep ahead 'tis well, But never trip your neighbor;
'Tis noble, when you can excel By honest, patient labor;—
But if you are outstripped at last, Press on as bold as ever; Remember, though you are surpassed,
'Tis better late than never!

Ne'er labor for an idle boast Of victory o'er another; But, while you strive your utmost, Deal fairly with a brother.

Choose well the path in which you run, Succeed by noble daring; Then, though the last, when once 'tis won,
Your crown is worth the wearing.

Then never fret, if left behind, Nor slacken your endeavor; But ever keep this truth in mind
'Tis better late than never.

MISCELLANEOUS.
Siamese Amazons.
The army of the King of Siam contains a corps which particularly attracts the attention of strangers; this is the battalion of the King's Guard, composed of women.
This battalion consists of 400 women, chosen from among the handsomest and most robust girls in the country. They receive excellent pay, and their discipline is perfect. They are admitted to serve at the age of thirteen, and are placed in the army of reserve at twenty-five. From that period they no longer serve about the King's person, but are employed to guard the Royal Palaces and the Crown lands.

On entering the army they make a vow of chastity, from which there is no exemption unless any of them should attract the King's attention and be admitted among his legitimate wives. The King's choice seldom falls on the most beautiful, but on the most skilled in military exercises.
The hope of such a reward animates them with extraordinary zeal for military instruction, and Europeans are astonished at the martial appearance of that battalion as well as its skill in manoeuvring and its excellent discipline.

The costume these women wear is very rich. Their full dress is composed of a white woollen robe, embroidered with gold. The cloth is extremely fine, and descends as far as the knee; it is covered with a light coat of mail and a gait cuirass.

The arms are free, and the head is covered with a gait casque. When wearing this dress on State occasions their only weapon is a lance, which they handle with wonderful dexterity. With their undress they are armed with a musket.

The battalion is composed of four companies, and each company of 100 women, commanded by a captain of their sex.
Should the captain die, the company is drilled during three days by the King, who appoints the most competent to succeed to the command. The battalion has been commanded for the last five years by a woman who saved the King's life at a tiger hunt by her courage and skill. She possesses great influence at court, and is much respected by those under her command. She has the same establishment as a member of the royal family, and ten elephants are placed at her service.

The King never undertakes any expedition without being accompanied by his female guard, nor does he ever hunt, or even ride out, without an escort of the same guard, who are devotedly attached to his person. Each individual of the battalion has five negroes attached to her service; and having thus no domestic occupations, she can devote herself exclusively to the duties of her profession.
There is a parade ground near the city, where one company is stationed for two

VARIETY.

A tailor in want of a 'cutter,' advertised in one of the papers to that effect. The following morning while in his store, cogitating upon the instability of things in general, and praying that there might soon be a change in the fashion of gentlemen garments, when a son of the Emerald Isle, with wisps of hay and straw decorating his beard and hair, made his appearance.

The store-keeper, thinking he saw a customer before him, inquired with his best smile, what he could do for him, when the following dialogue took place:
'Is Mr. — in?'
'Yes, sir, I am he.'
'An' shure now you advertised for a cutter.'
'Yes.'
'Then I have a friend who has one.'
'One what?'
'Och! git away wid you now, you know phat I mane.'
'Do I?'
'Yes, thrue for you now, an' he whants to know if you would like to tak the bells and Buffalo robes as well, for he would sell them all cheap, a rale bargain.'

It was some time before the tailor could make him understand that he wanted a cutter-out of cloth, not a small sleigh; when he did, the Hibernian departed in high ill humor, firmly convinced that the advertisement had been put in for the express purpose of making a fool of him.

'Pray, madam,' said a young, romantic looking gentleman, addressing the daughter of an up-town bookseller, whom her father had deputed to stop in the shop just while he went to the next door—an amiable creature, about the age of sweet sixteen—may I ask if you have Ten Thousand a Year?'

'No, sir,' she sweetly but simply replied, letting her finely lashed eyelids fall—'no sir; but father says he'll settle the house in — Street on me; that, though, don't rent for more than four hundred a year!'

The young book-buyer had liked to die a larfin', as Sam Slick says.

Mr. O'Flaherty undertook to tell how many were at the party. 'The two Cro-gans was one, myself was two, Mike Finn was three, and—and—who the mischief was four? Let me see (counting his fingers)—the two Crogans was one, Mike Finn was two, myself was three—and—bedad! there was four of us; but St. Patrick couldn't tell the name of the other.
Now it's meself that have it! Mike Finn was one, the two Crogans was two, meself was three—and—and—the powers, I think there was but three of us after all.'

A gentleman of color had a severe attack of rheumatism, which finally settled in his foot. He doctored it and nursed it, but all to no purpose. Finally, tearing away the bandages, he stuck it out, and with a shake of his fist over it, exclaimed:
'Ache away, den, ole feller—ache away I shan't do nuffin more for yer; dis chile can stan' it as long as you kin, so ache away.'

A teacher asked a little girl, 'Wha country is opposite us on the globe?'
'Don't know, sir,' was the answer.
'Well, now,' pursued the teacher, 'if I were to bore a hole through the earth, and you were to go in at this end, where would you come out?'
'Out of the hole, sir!' replied the pupil, with an air of triumph.

The surest way to fill a private apartment: whether in a printing office, a cotton factory, or sausage-shop, with visitors, is to place over the door a placard, bearing the inscription, 'No Admittance.' No person ever read that prohibition over an entrance, without instantly being attacked by an ungovernable desire to rush right in.

An auctioneer's clerk being directed by his employer to advertise a copy of a fresco by Raphael, wrote, 'A fresh cow by traffle.'
