

It is pleasant to behold the signs of prosperity in Bellevue, and to witness the busy bustle of our citizens, both the old residents and the many new comers. Several new merchants have already received their stocks of goods, and are only waiting to complete their stores, to open and offer their wares to the public.

Heretofore the town has been behind the country, and as a consequence, the people of Bellevue, and Sarpy county, have been obliged to go to Council Bluffs or Glenwood, for the purchase of merchandise, but hereafter from present indications, we have no doubt, that our citizens will be able to supply themselves at home, and no longer be tributary to our neighbors in Iowa.

The 'signs of the times' are favorable to Bellevue, emigration is pouring in—our hotels are full, and there is a great demand for dwellings, stores &c. It is manifest that the superior advantages of Bellevue are attracting attention.

Since our last issue, we have had several boats up from St. Louis, among them the Spread Eagle, White Cloud, Gray Cloud, Omaha, Florence and the Min-ne-ha-ha, all of them with freight and passengers for Bellevue.

Junction City. The late high water has tested the value of Junction City as a town site, and very forcibly demonstrated the wisdom of its selection. While most of the bottom lands on the Iowa side have been inundated, submerging some, and indeed most of the towns laid out on the flats, Junction City has remained above the water, showing conclusively, that it is on higher ground than any of the bottom towns.
