that horrid, cursed smell; my heart absolutely sank within me, for his wife, his poor wife, had been uppermost in my mind all the past week.

"Well, Mr. Jenkins," said Smith, "have you seen your friend Jones lately?" (It was in Jones's establishment that I had obtained the situation for Smith.)

"No," said I, "why?" I knew why; I was sure of it before the fellow answered me, "He has discharged me." I knew it. I was sure of it; his infernal breath told me so the moment he put his head within my room. All my admonitions, all his solemn promises, the necessity for a character in his desperate situation, his poor wife,—all, all went for nothing—the fellow was doomed. I had no heart to talk with him then, but what little I did say went to his soul in language that left its imprint there, as though burned with a red hot brand. I told him he was a drunkard, and there was no hope for him. I had forewarned him of the consequence of drink before I had obtained for him the situation; he had earnestly and faithfully promised me that if I would find a place for him, he would never touch the cursed liquor again; I had pleaded with him for the sake of his friends, for the salvation of his very soul, to reform; he had solemnly promised, and deliberately broken that promise. I told him to go, for I could not at that time hold any further communication with him. Silently he took up his hat and walked out of my room a humiliated man.

I immediately called upon my friend Jones; his story was quickly told, and was just what I expected—"Your friend Smith smelled so infernally that I could not stand it; my customers could not stand it; he was soggily every afternoon and unfit for business, and I discharged him. Why did you not tell me he drank?"

This was plain and explicit; it was decidedly to the point; I felt rebuked for the deception I had practised upon Jones, and had nothing to say.

CHAPTER IV. AND LAST.

Smith is done for, and all hope is over; he is in the rapids of Niagara, and no power on earth can save him. His poor wife is hopeless, and the dark night of despair has settled upon her soul. Oh! rum! how much misery hast thou to answer for! Smith has no power over his passion for the liquid which has blighted his prospects for this life, and will soon send him into another, a miserable, debased, polluted being. I saw him in Broadway not a week since, in the same dirty black suit, the thermometer at 90, in the shade, and his coat buttoned up to his chin, his pale, anxious countenance giving evidence of the terrible struggle going on within his breast, and yet nothing can save him.—The picture of the poor, lone being whose fate is linked with his, and to whom still clings, is ever before the eyes of the tender-hearted and now anything but envious Mrs. Jenkins, and we daily talk of the terrible spectacle of the doomed man and his unfortunate wife. There is no hope for him now; no stronger appeal can be made than has been made; he is passed being reached, and I shall not be surprised if I recognize in the morning papers, ere long, under the head of "picked up in the water," the bloated, run-soaked and besotted remains of my once fashionable and rich and envied neighbor Smith!

Things Wise and Otherwise.

A "fast" man undertook the task of teasing an eccentric preacher:
"Do you believe," said he, in the story of the "Fatted Calf?"
"Yes," said the preacher.
"Well, then, was it a male or female calf that was killed?"
"A female," replied the divine.
"How do you know that?"
"Because, (looking the interrogator in the face) I see that the male is still alive!"

To the revilings of a native American, a German replied thus:
"The gentleman taunts me with not having been in the country as long as he has. Let me tell the gentleman that my only excuse is that I am an American from choice, while he is one by necessity. If there is any difference between us, it is that I came into the country with my trousers on, while the gentleman came into it naked."

"Is molasses good for a cough?" inquired Jones, who had taken a slight cold and was barking with considerable energy.
"It ought to be," said Brown, "it is much sold for consumption."

"Are you fond of Hogg's Tales?" said a rather verdant young lady to a shepherd.
"No—but I mean have you read Hogg's Tales?"
"No," said the pumpkin, "our hogs are all white or black; I don't think there is a red one among 'em."

Widow Grizzle's husband lately died of cholera. In the midst of the most acute bodily pain, after the hand of death had touched him, and while writhing in agony, his gentle wife said to him, "Well, Mr. Grizzle, you needn't kick round so, and wear all the sheets out, if you are dying!"

Hobbs, the locksmith, has picked one of Banquo's cory locks. He did it with a pick-axe. He is now at work on a wed-lock.

"Father, what does the printer live on?"
"Why, my child?"
"Because you said you hadn't paid him for four years, and still take the paper."
"Wife, spank that child!"

JOHN A. PARKER, Register, Land Office, May 19th, 1857.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO THE COMMISSIONER OF THE LAND OFFICE, DATED LAND OFFICE,
OMAHA, April 15, 1857.

Under the act of twenty-third May, 1844, the "Judges of the County Court" are given the authority to enter "Town Sites." In this Territory there are no such officers as "Judges of the County Court," but the Legislature has recognized the "County Commissioners" as the proper persons to enter "Town Sites," and we have, in view of the spirit of the law, permitted such entries, in the hope that it will meet the approbation of the Department.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JOHN A. PARKER, Register.

We think we can show how much cheaper it is to take the Lady's Book at Three Dollars than any other magazine at Two Dollars. We will take a late number of both. The Two Dollar Magazine contained 36 articles, the Lady's Book 82.

The Two Dollar Magazine contained 32 engravings, the Lady's Book 56.
The Two Dollar Magazine contained 64 pages, the Lady's Book 100.
Twenty-four more engravings, twenty-six more articles, and thirty-six more pages, nearly double the quantity. The lowest club price of the Two Dollar Magazine is $1.25; lowest club price of Lady's Book $1.87, only 42 cents difference in the price, which is three and a half cents on each number, and for that sum (three and a half cents), you receive twenty-six more articles, twenty-four more engravings, and thirty-six more pages monthly—certainly a very cheap three and a half cent's worth.

This view of the case has probably never before been presented, but it is a true statement, which any lady can convince herself of by comparing the two magazines.
