"THE CLOSED SHOP POLICY."

One of the staunchest union men in the country is Theodore McCulloch of the Omaha Bee, and he is amply able to present in a convincing fashion the union side of the present controversy entitled the "Open Shop vs. the Closed Shop."

It is with the keenest satisfaction, therefore, that The Wagerworker announces that Mr. McCulloch will be in Lincoln on June 13, under the auspices of the Central Labor Union, and address the general public on the subject, "Defense of the Union or Closed Shop Contract." This address is not alone for union men, but for everybody, and everybody, regardless of affiliation, race, age or sex is cordially invited to be present. The meeting place will be announced in ample time. If possible the Auditorium will be secured, and failing that some other large and commodious hall will be provided.

Every union man in Lincoln should take an active interest in making this meeting a rousing success.

The editor of The Wagerworker has known "Mac" for nearly twenty years; has worked with him, and knows his ability as a newspaper man as well as his devotion to unionism—and "Mac" is as good a union man as he is a newspaper man, and there are no better newspaper men in the great west. His address is certain to be a benefit to union men as well as an education to non-unionists and the opponents of unionism.

Let's all join hands in giving Mr. McCulloch the largest audience that ever greeted an advocate of unionism in Lincoln.

Let every union man who is a voter see to it that W. A. Woodward, republican candidate for alderman-at-large, is allowed to remain in private life. Woodward is no friend of unionism. The mansion he lives in was built by non-union labor working "scab" hours, and he is enjoying a goodly fortune obtained on the "10 per cent a minute" loan plan.

Theodore McCulloch, "square man," union printer and managing editor of the Omaha Bee, will address an open meeting of the Central Labor Union on June 13. Everybody invited. He will speak on the "Union or Closed Shop Contract."

Ernest Hoppe has made a good councilman, and will make a good alderman. He has voted for recognition of union labor. The editor of The Wagerworker never spoke to Mr. Hoppe in his life. Rojstvensky performed a good deal of thundering in his index

There are 275 union carpenters in Lincoln who are voters. Will they vote for a candidate whose mansion was built by "scabs"? There were no union carpenters on Woodward's house.

but he knows where Hoppe stands. before meeting up with Togo. In this Ro reminded us of Post, the man who makes imitation food.

By the way, did Mr. Brock make a record as councilman that entitles him to election as alderman? Look it up. The Wagerworker opines that he did not.
