A Dining Room Novelty.

A spoonrack is something new. Where the wainscot or furniture of the dining room is of Flemish oak, one of these in a panel effect to hang on the wall is distinguished by Bavarian hand carving, the wood a deep smoke brown and the design antique and of Venetian suggestion. There are pegs that hold between them six pewter spoons eight inches in length with round bowls and apiculate tops. It, of course, could be used for a collection of handsome silver spoons of odd shapes and foreign origin.--Vogue.

Three-Minute Date Cake.

Two eggs, one-half cup sweet milk, one and one-third cups brown sugar, one-third cup butter, melted, one and one-third cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, half of a nutmeg, one-half pound or one cupful dates, cut fine. This is all put together and beaten three minutes exactly. Bake in two layers 20 to 25 minutes.
Filling--One cup sliced dates, one-quarter cup granulated sugar, one and one-half cups of one lemon, two table spoons hot water.

SUSTAINS STATE BANK TAX.

Oklahoma Law Upheld By Judge at Guthrie.

Judge A. H. Houston, in the district court at Guthrie, Okla., sustained a demurrer filed by Attorney General West in an injunction suit brought by the Noble State bank against the state banking board and the bank commissioner, regarding the collection of a state bank tax, on the ground that there was not sufficient facts in the petition to constitute a case of action. This is the first test on the Oklahoma guarantee deposit law. In passing on the case Judge Houston stated that under the police powers of the state given by the act the defendants have the power to collect the tax, as the banks that are allowed to do business in this state are corporations and that they are as much accountable to the legislature as any other corporation which serves the public.

Potato Nest with Peas.

Pare and boil good, firm potatoes sufficient for the family. Drain and mash in the ordinary way or press through a potato colander and place on a platter, leaving a round hollow space in the center, into which pour hot creamed peas. Sprinkle lightly with cayenne pepper and spread over the potatoes two well beaten eggs. Over this sprinkle generously grated cheese. Bake in the oven until the top is slightly browned. Served hot this dish makes a dish fit for royalty.

Mr. McVicker's Address at Typographical Union Anniversary.

Following is the address delivered at the silver anniversary celebration of Lincoln Typographical Union, No. 209, by Hugh C. McVicker, a charter member of the union:
Ladies and Gentlemen of the Nebraska Press Association:
As a charter member of Lincoln Typographical Union, and a latter day member of the press association, I have been asked to welcome you to this modest celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the union's organization. Between the editor and the printer there is a bond of sympathy which will take more than bad copy on the part of one and bad proofs from the other to break. When Horace Greeley, over what he regarded as an unusually forceful editorial, wrote the heading, "There Is Balm in Gilead," and was pained the next day to read in the paper "There's a Barn in Gilead," he is said to have first indulged in profanity, and then as a philosopher to have remarked that it was proof of what he had often observed--that the editor and the compositor should keep close together, and the closer the better.

This observance has been delayed a few days that the two branches of the art preservative might celebrate together. Just a few words on the founding of the union. The inspiration came, not from the working printers, but from a country editor employed temporarily in some department at the capitol, and the meeting at which it was decided to apply for a charter was held in one of the rooms of the state house. The first meeting following the receipt of the charter was in a little room over a building on O street, now the site of the Rudge & Guenzel department store.

Less than twenty printers enrolled at that time for membership, where there are today twenty with a hundred added. In the original membership of twenty the opposites in age and temperament were represented. Half a dozen men were on the shady side of fifty, and at least three were still in their teens. Col. Dennis C. Hynes, a dignified and kindly Irishman of the old school, veteran of the civil war, personal friend of Joseph Medill, and an editorial writer at times on the Chicago Tribune, but more often "one of the boys of the road," setting type as his inclination and necessities required, took the presiding officer's chair with easy assurance and without any preliminary nomination or election. The colonel was suave and stern by turns. For instance: "I want the very fullest expression of opinion," was his opening announcement, but when John Burke, fortified in advance for a strenuous session, attempted to outline the manner in which things should be done, he was warned that another word from him would result in his forcible ejection, even if the chairman was obliged to act in the dual capacity of presiding officer and sergeant-at-arms.

But that was one of the rare instances. The meetings, with hardly an exception, were orderly and parliamentary. The first president was Charles M. Keefer, at present superintendent of the book and job printing departments of the State Journal company, and the first secretary Will L. Pickett, now the agent of the Burlington at Plattsmouth. One of the first traveling cards issued was to Frank D. Reed, former president of the Nebraska Press association, now manager of the malls and morals of the town of Shelton.

The union led a precarious existence for many years; its charter and records were burned; financial embarrassment was generally its portion, and some of its members at times faltered, but it never gave up, and on this, its twenty-fifth anniversary, it is recognized as one of the strongest and most conservative labor organizations in Lincoln.
