clothes on, not having a chance to dress up for the occasion. The friends present made the most of the occasion and a very delightful evening was spent. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Pound, Mr. and Mrs. I. T. Wilson, Mrs. Berto Wilson, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Lucy Bradley, Mrs. August Radebach, Mrs. Ella Howard, Mrs. Parke Van Horn and Mrs. F. J. Smith; Messrs. Harry and Louis Pound, Merle Wilson, Millard Smith, and Gehman Plehn, and Misses Hazel Smith and Lela Bradley. The invited guests were not told that it was a wedding anniversary, but several knew it was, and surprised the couple with handsome gifts of chinaware. Mr. and Mrs. Smith appreciated the occasion thoroughly.

TRUE AS GOSPEL.

"To be thoroughly successful we must establish more friendly relations with one another, forget the past, be more generous, liberal and fair-minded, help each other to do better, nobler things, gain better conditions, and leave our footprints clear and distinct on the sands of time"—Frank Duffy, General Secretary of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

SOME PRINTER DOPE

Last week this department referred to John Funnell's charges of undue interference in Philadelphia union's representation at the Hot Springs convention. Now comes Vice President John W. Hays and indignantly denies Mr. Funnell's charges—and then proceeds to admit by indirection that the charges are true. Mr. Funnell charged Mr. Wallace as saying: "In the early summer the four members who had been elected to represent No. 2 at the Hot Springs convention were called in conference at the Odd Fellows' Temple, at which were present the officers of No. 2 and Vice President Hays. At that meeting the delegates were informed that they would have to go along with the Executive Council of the I. T. U. or Philadelphia would get no consideration at their hands."

Vice President Hays indignantly denies this and then proceeds to say: "The statement that the officers of No. 2 and the delegates-elect were informed that they would have to go along with the Executive Council of the I. T. U. or Philadelphia would get no consideration at their hands, is absolutely untrue. I was myself responsible for the calling of the meeting of the officers and delegates mentioned and stated emphatically that, being in charge of the Philadelphia situation, I desired to know what the delegates expected to present to the Hot Springs convention; that it could readily be realized that if the delegation from No. 2 went to the convention for the purpose of antagonizing the Executive Council on the floor of the convention the members of the Council would be forced to take the floor in explanation and that more than likely the Council would be sustained, and as a result the convention would not do anything for the Philadelphia union."

We confess our inability to grasp executive council logic. Mr. Funnell says that the delegates were warned that they must go along with the executive council. Mr. Hays denies it and then admits that he told the Philadelphia delegation that if they antagonized the executive council they would get nothing. Mr. Hays' denial is merely a plea of confession and avoidance. He admits over his own signature the truth of Philadelphia's charges. Mr. Hays lays stress on the fact that over $500,000 has been put into the eight hour fight in Philadelphia, but neglects to say that he drew a fair salary for expending it. He also emphasizes the fact that during the same time Philadelphia union put in but $15,000 for the eight hour fight. Those familiar with the Philadelphia situation are aware that this is a sizeable amount. Philadelphia union having some very heavy local burdens to carry in addition to the assessment. Philadelphia's delegates to the Hot Springs convention have proved their case by Mr. Hays' denial.

The Associated Press dispatches of March 10 carried the following information:

"Washington, March 10.—James M. Lynch, president of the International Typographical Union, and T. C. Parsons, president of the local Typographical Union, conferred with President Roosevelt at the White House today regarding the appointment of a public printer. The president's callers did not recommend any one in particular, but told him they would appreciate it if he would select a practical printer for the place. It was pointed out that in the appointment of some one who has had practical experience in such work considerable money would be saved to the government and also there would be less friction in the office. The president did not indicate to his visitors what he would do."

"Gene Lyman of the Star chapel has shied his castor into the ring and is an announced candidate for delegate honors.

Charley Barngrover sent one of his cards to Secretary Bramwood and received the following letter of acknowledgment:

"Indianapolis, Ind., March 6.—Chas. E. Barngrover, 2815 Starr St., Lincoln, Nebr.—Dear Mr. Barngrover: I received today your card saying that you 'never tried it, but want to be "it" this time.' Your aspiration to serve No. 209 as delegate to the Boston session is a laudable one, and eighteen years' continuous membership is a record on which a member can well base his claim for preferment. No doubt the Boston session will be one of the largest, if not the largest, the international has ever held.

"If you are successful in your candidacy for delegate, I hope to have the pleasure of meeting you in August. Fraternally yours,

"J. W. BRAMWOOD."

James Monroe Kreiter of Washington, D. C., contributes an interesting lot of pungent paragraphs to the Washington Trades Unionist. One of his recent ones reads as follows: "An Omaha candidate for the American Federation of Labor in the International Typographical Union is a member of the Commercial Club of that city, and is on a standing committee. Just what the Commercial Club stands for is hard to tell, but one thing is certain, it does not advocate trades unionism. Of course this particular candidate is not F. A. Kennedy (Sadie Maguire)."

Lincoln Typographical Union made a good impression on the Nebraska Press Association, and made the union's silver anniversary an event long to be remembered with pleasure. —Greensboro (N. C.) Labor News.

James F. McHugh has been secretary-treasurer of the Journeymen Stone Cutters' Association of North America, and the editor of their official journal, so long that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary.

His salary has been practically journeyman's wages for all these years. Recently he asked for an increase in salary and it was granted. Then came the "financial flurry" and the loss to stonecutters of many jobs. Mr. McHugh has announced that he will not accept the increase granted until times get better and work is once more flourishing.

That reminds us of the action of some other international officers—because it is so different.

The executive board of the Stonecutters delegated the president of that organization to attend the convention at Washington, February 10, to formally organize a Building Trades section of the A. F. of L. The sum of $200 was set aside for his expenses. The president delegated Ernest Edler of Washington, a member of the grievance committee, to attend to the matter, saying in explanation of his action:

"The grievance committee is, I presume, not especially busy during this dull winter season, and I am satisfied Brother Edler can fill the bill in both capacities, and save over $200 needless expense. I shall hereafter absolutely refuse to take part in any organization work where a competent member of the G. U. is already on the ground, unless it is necessary for your president to be there in his official capacity."

Once more this reminds us of the action of another international's president—because it is so different.

Guess Guy Green, manager of the Lincoln ball team, wouldn't make a hit by having the Garment Workers' label on his team's uniforms, the allied printing trades label on the score cards and the cigarmakers' label on the boxes carried by the "butchers." Guess not!

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Smith, 1725 P street, were married twenty years ago last Wednesday, March 11. In recognition of the event their daughter Hazel planned a surprise for them which worked to perfection, as they were caught with their every-day
