The nerve centers require nutrition. If the digestion is impaired, the nerve centers become anemic, and nervous debility is the result.

WAY ALWAYS OPEN THANKSGIVING DAY

ONE MAN'S SOMEWHAT GREW. SOME VIEW OF LIFE.

With What He Supposed Was Dose of Deadly Poison in His Pocket, the World Took On a Rosy Hue.

"Every man should have a hobby," said the fat man. "Now, mine's sui-

The thin man nearly swallowed his cigarette.

"Suicide? You? Well, of all the freaks I ever heard of!" "Certainly," continued the fat one, placidly, as he munched his chicken croquette. "That is what makes me so happy and take so cheerful a view of life. You have no idea what a comfort it is to me. I used to be thin, you know, like you, and could never eat chicken croquettes or souerkraut and frankfurters—they gave me a fearful indigestion. That was because I was always worrying about something. Then all of a sudden, this idea occurred to me about suicide. I decided to commit it. I forget now whether it was a business trouble or a girl-I think it was a girl. I asked a medical student friend of mine what was the surest and neatest way to croak and he said 'cyanide of potassium.' I asked him would he give me a little hunk and he promised to steal it out of the laboratory first chance he got. "Now, you may not believe it, but just as soon as I had that piece of white crystal in my pocket, I began to be a different man. Instead of taking it that night, as I had intended to. I just wrapped it up in a piece of tissue paper and put it in my pocket to use next day. I wrote a parting letter to the girl-yes, I'm sure now it was a girl-and decided to have one good night's rest, anyway. Well, the next morning it was a beautiful, sunshiny day and everything looked kind of different. My mood had changed and I decided to wait a little while and see if anything came of the letter. Nothing at all happened and then I found I'd forgotten to mail it, so I let it go. Things kind of straightened themselves out and I was real glad I hadn't wasted the cyanide.

"I hadn't carried the thing around with me more than two weeks before I began to get fat. You see, nothing bothered me. Whenever I felt real down and out all I had to do was make up my mind to swallow the crystal and I'd take it out of my pocket and have a look at it and put it back again till to-morrow. It was the open door to freedom-the escape. It made me independent of everything and everybody. It's really a marvel for chirking a fellow up."

The thin man laid down his knife "Well, I'll be - Say! Have you got it with you now?" "Sure! I may use it to-night if this deal with Skrubbs doesn't go through. Here it is." And he held out in his hand a nice little piece of washing "My friend the medical student," he added hastily, replacing the crystal in his pocket, "told me to be awfully careful and not show it to

"I don't wonder," said the thin man without a smile. "It might cost him his reputation as a chemist."

Napoleon and the Canal.

The steadily increasing estimates as to the final cost of the Panama canal serves to keep that projected waterway very much in the public eye. But probably very few know that if an ambition which had been cherished by the late Emperor Napoleon III. had ever reached fruition, there probably would never have been any attempt to cut a canal across the Panama isthmus.

It was after Prussia had defeated France that Napoleon conceived the project of opening a canal through the Nicaraguan route. It seems that the idea first occurred to Napoleon while he was a prisoner in the fortress of Ham. At that period he filled his time with schemes for great undertakings, and to a friendly navy officer who visited him is his cell he revealed his plan for a Nicaragua canal. On reaching England after his release he printed his plans, calculations, and surveys, together with a map, which eventually came into the possession of a Mr. Haynes of Manchester street, Manchester square. Jerrold's "Life of Napoleon" makes brief reference to this ambition of Napoleon, and says that political events put a stop to the enterprise.

At the Milliner's. An Atchison woman who has a sincere desire to the economical, says the Kansas City Journal, took a blue feather, some velvet, and a rose to a milliner, asking the milliner to furnish the shape and trim it. The woman was proud of the feather, the velvet, and the rose, as they were as good as new, but the milliner cast just one glance at them, and then the woman began to apologize. "Apologies are not necessary," said the milliner icily. "You surely don't expect me to use anything like that!" And the woman didn't. Another woman said to her milliner, bravely: "I want a hat that doesn't cost a cent over five dol-lars." "W-h-a-t!" screamed the milliner. "I mean," stammered the woman," "that doesn't cost over $15." "Oh, well, that's better," said the milliner.

Canada's Day of Thanks a Month Earlier Than in the United States.

For some reason better known to the Canadians themselves than to the people on this side of the line, our Canadian cousins celebrated their Thanksgiving a month or more earlier than we do. It may be that the Canadian turkey had become impatient, and sounded a note of warning, or it may be that the "frost on the pumpkin" declared itself. But whatever the reason, their Thanksgiving day is past. It may have been that the reasons for giving thanks so much earlier than we do were pushing themselves so hard and so fast that the Canadians were ashamed to postpone the event. They have had reasons, and good ones, too, tor giving thanks. Their great broad areas of prairie land have yielded in abundance, and here, by the way, it is not uninteresting to the friends of the millions of Americans who have made their home in Canada during the past few years to know that they have participated most generously in the "cutting of the melon." Probably the western portion of Canada, comprising the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, have the greatest reason of any of the provinces to exress in the most enthusiastic manner their gratitude. The results in the line of production give ample reason for devout thanksgiving to Providence. This year has surpassed all others in so far as the total increase in the country's wealth is concerned. There is no question that Providence was espe cially generous. The weather conditions were perfect, and during the Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. ripening and harvesting period, there was nothing to interfere. And now it was well it was so, for with a demand for labor that could not be supplied, there was the greatest danger, but with suitable weather the garnering of the grain has been successfully accompitshed. There have been low general averages, but these are accounted for by the fact that farmers were indifferent, relying altogether upon what a good soil would do. There will be no more low averages though, for this year has shown what good, careful farming will do. It will produce 130 million bushels of wheat from seven million acres, and it will produce a splendid lot of oats, yielding anywhere from 50 to 100 bushels per This on land that has cost but from $10 to $15 per acre—many farmers have realized sufficient from this year's crop to pay the entire cost of their farms. The Toronto Globe says:

"The whole population of the West rejoices in the bounty of Providence, and sends out a message of gratitude and appreciation of the favors which have been bestowed on the country. The cheerfulness which has abounded with industry during the past six months has not obliterated the conception of the source from which the blessings have flown, and the good feeling is combined with a spirit of thankfulness for the privilege of living in so fruitful a land. The misfortunes of the past are practically forgotten, because there is great cause to contemplate with satisfaction the comforts of the present. Thanksgiving should be a season of unusual en-

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a retage for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.
