

Campaign Notes.

Richard Wolfe of Denver will establish a populist paper in that city. There are many reasons for believing that Colorado will go populist this time. The people out there have had enough of republican military despotism and democratic anarchy.

Dr. F. B. Lawrence of Eldorado, Kas., made a motion at the Springfield convention to adjourn until after the democratic convention. He now says that convention was wiser than he was. Since he got back to Kansas things seem to have broken loose, very much after the fashion of old alliance days, and Dr. Lawrence will likely be the populist candidate for congress in the 4th congressional district.

Dr. C. F. Taylor is editor of the Medical World of Philadelphia. He runs an economic and sociologic addendum to his medical journal which has been along strictly scientific lines, but he now says: "While I have heretofore avoided partisan lines in my 'Talks' as far as possible, I fear I will now be duly branded and labelled a populist by the medical profession. Of course I don't care except as it may affect the efficiency of my work among the doctors." Dr. Taylor also runs the "Equity Series." No public speaker on the reform side can afford to be without those scholarly documents. They contain populism as written up by some of the greatest professors and scientists of this age.

After printing the platforms of the two old parties, Dr. Taylor gives his view of them as follows: "It may be asked, where do the people come in, as all the courting and trimming is toward the financial and corporation powers. The old trick of these powers is to make the platform and ticket of both the dominant parties 'safe and sane,' and then they are sure of protection. They contribute freely to both parties both before the conventions and during the campaign, to keep them both in good humor, and they are indifferent to which ticket is elected. In 1896 and 1900 the democratic party got away from them, and money was poured out for its defeat, and it is supposed that much money has been spent since 1896 to recapture it, which has finally been successful. As it is good policy for the parties to alternate occasionally as long as they are 'good,' it is probable that these powers will rather favor the election of the democratic party this time, because it is its 'turn' and also as a reward for returning to 'safety and sanity.' But the question still is, where do the people come in."

Populism is breaking out in new spots all the time. Not only has it a squad of scholarly defenders in Philadelphia, but they are spreading out all over the province that Matt Quay ruled so long with a rod of iron.

A. W. Maxwell, who managed the Hearst campaign in Iowa, in a signed statement repudiates the action of the democratic national convention at St. Louis and declares his intention of bolting the ticket. Mr. Maxwell tenders his resignation as a member of the democratic state committee and relinquishes all claim upon the chairmanship of that body. If those men in Iowa who were opposed to plutocracy had read The Independent and paid attention to its advice, they would not be in the embarrassing situation in which they now find themselves.

Mr. Bryan admits that Judge Parker can be considered only as the lesser of two monstrous evils. Wherefore, brethren, let us turn our aching eyes toward Watson and Tibbles, and let the leaky old ships sink.—Bixby, in State Journal.

The New York Herald says that while a certain amount of lying in a political leader may be overlooked, that Hill certainly went beyond the limits when he solemnly declared and reiterated his declaration under cross-examination that he did not know what Judge Parker's views on the money question were, and the next day as vehemently asserted when that telegram came that every one knew and no one had had any doubts upon the matter for months. Hill belongs to that category of gentlemen in New York that the democratic convention of Nebraska is going to put up an electoral ticket to support.

If the money question was not an issue, why did Judge Parker send that telegram? It gave the lie direct and plain to the action of the convention and those southern gentlemen who have always heretofore resorted to pistols and coffee when the lie was passed, like arrant cowards, did not resent the insult. They were as quick to obey the order from Wall street as was Parker himself. All the New York papers, the day the platform was adopted, threatened to bolt. But Bryan, he won't bolt, no matter what a democratic convention may do.

G. M. Mullins, democratic nominee for county attorney, Sarpy county, Nebraska, has withdrawn his name from the ticket. He says that he cannot accept the gold standard.

The Springfield Republican uses only Bostonese in its editorial columns and tries to enforce the use of that dialect on all matter that goes into its columns. Last week the editor was reading the republican platform and when he came to that statement which says, "A democratic tariff has always been followed by business adversity; a republican tariff by business prosperity," he dropped his Bostonese for once and said the men who made that statement "lied." Every one knows that the high protective tariff enacted by the republicans in 1872 was followed by one of the most severe business depressions this country ever suffered and there are two or three more instances of the same kind, the last being the McKinley tariff of 1890 which was followed by poverty and panics that we will all remember as long as we live.

The oneness of the two old political parties is brought out in the letters from the Philippines of William E. Curtis. Curtis is a blue-blooded republican. In one of his recent letters from Manila he says: "It is quite as true here as among the negroes of the south that education unfits a man for farming or working at any of the trades." That is plutocracy. That is what the two old parties stand for. Populists fuse with either of them? Not much!

An Associated press dispatch from Washington says: "Democratic leaders say that if Mr. Bryan will agree to devote his energies to the west and particularly to Nebraska with the idea of carrying Nebraska for Parker and Davis they will see that he is supplied with ample funds for all campaign purposes."

Henry Watterson is in the seventh heaven of delight over the result of the St. Louis convention and Judge Parker's telegram. He says that "it severs democracy from populism." The democrats of Nebraska don't seem to want to be separated.

James A. Fulton of McKeesport, Pa., writes: "The outlook is very promising. Populism will register a larger vote than ever in its history. People will support the cause this year that have never given it serious consideration in the past."

The Parker telegram is causing some queer statements to be made by the republican "gold standard" fellows. United States Treasurer Roberts says: "Experience shows that there is more call for silver dollars and small notes in the ratio of the supply than there is for gold or can be for gold." It is enough to make a bishop swear after reading that statement to reflect that Roberts and all his kind, both republicans and democrats, have been declaring for ten years that silver is corded up by the tons in Washington treasury vaults and cannot be got into circulation because nobody will have it.

The Beatrice Express and several other republican papers are saying that the democratic party died very suddenly after the St. Louis convention, and the corpse has been decently buried. They therefore conclude that the republican party will receive practically all the votes in their counties. These editors have been "hitting the pipe" and their dreams are more extravagant than any Ah Sin ever experienced. There are more opponents to Wall street and more men ready to fight against its predatory hoards than there ever was before in this glorious old homeland of Nebraska.

The World-Herald calls him "Gov. Hill" now.
