

The great agricultural and stock raising state of Nebraska is forging to the front as the greatest producer of first-class live stock in U. S. This is owing to its many natural advantages—it being a great corn and grass country, and the great bumper crops raised there, with its progressive and hustling men of good business, makes it one of the best propositions as a money making state. There is today in Central Nebraska, the largest importing and breeding establishment of pure bred black Percherons, Belgians and Coach stallions owned by any one man in U. S. Any day you can see 150 big black stallions weighing from 1800 to 2600 pounds being shown to buyers or exercised. This is a sight worth any stockman's time of going 1000 miles to see. A horse show there every day—better than any state fair. You can see there the three largest stallions in the United States—combined weight 7680 pounds and models in form, size, quality and action. You can see 2 year old and 3 year old stallions weighing a ton to 2000 pounds that can show their heels to the best of them. You can see every first, second and sweepstakes prize winner in every age and class of Percherons Belgians and Coachers at the greatest of State Fairs—that of Nebraska, 1904. You can see there 100 Black Stallions that were imported and shipped by special express train August 18th, 1904. You can buy there better imported, registered stallions at $1,300 and $1,500 than are being sold to "Farmers Stock Co's." at $2,500 to $5,000. If you do not find this so on a visit to this great importing barn, you will be paid $50 per day for your trouble—you the judge. This man spends four months each year in Europe. Selects his own horses direct from the best breeders—of which he knows all of them—He speaks the languages, knows the country, buys in large quantities, ships by train load, uses his own money and has no three to ten men as partners. His buyers get all middlemen's profits.

His stallions are of such superior quality that they do not have to be peddled to be sold—as only fourth rate stallions are peddled out to Horse Co's. First class stallions can always be sold at their home barns. Also, it costs $1,000 to form a Horse Co., and the farmer must pay it. If you want something much better than is peddled, and at 50c on the dollar, visit the "HOME OF THE WINNERS" of Frank Iams, St. Paul, Nebraska. Sole owner of the largest importing establishment of first class Stallions of any one man in the United States:

Visit Iams, the live horse man, that sells first class stallions at live and let live prices. Send for greatest horse catalog on earth. Wealth can not be created or destroyed by law. No law that was ever passed or that can be passed can destroy the utility of a bushel of wheat. Laws can transfer wealth from those who produce it to the hands of others, but it can not destroy it. The destruction of half of the money of the country can transfer wealth from those who are in debt to those who hold the evidences of debt, but it can not add to or diminish the amount of it. Wealth is not created by law, but by labor applied to land.

There is a strange story that comes from Elmira, N. Y. A freight train on the New York Central was wrecked and a shipment of jewelry was lost for which the road was responsible. A "tramp," a "hobo," found it and returned it. The road to reward him for his honesty gave him a position as brakeman where, it is said, he has proved very efficient. We have come, it seems, to a state of society where the chance to work is considered a great reward, and that "hoboes" prove efficient workmen when given situations. All that in this year of great prosperity and political landslides.

The daily papers do some queer stunts in English. The following is a sample taken from the Chicago Tribune: "The young woman whose body was found at Williamsburg hotel Monday night, and who had apparently committed suicide, was today identified." Where was that young woman when the coroner was trying to identify her, and what had the corpse found at the hotel to do with it?

The Chicago papers announce that Siegle Cooper & Co. have purchased about thirty acres of land in that city on which they will locate a big department store and create around it a model village for their employes. That sort of thing has been attempted many times, notably in the case of Pullman, and has always ended in disaster and failure. It ends as socialistic colonies always end. Neither rich men nor poor men can overthrow the laws of nature or change the character and natural impulses of men and women. The desire of freedom from restraint and a home is as much a part of human nature as it is of the birds. Neither law nor philanthropists can overthrow it. Siegel & Cooper had much better try to devise some scheme whereby the enormous profits of their great establishment shall remain more largely in the ownership of their employes, to invest or spend as each individual sees fit than to undertake to build up a socialist colony where individualism is to be crushed out. Man was not made for that kind of a life. He was cast in a different mould and can not be forced into a mould made for him by even the most philanthropic.

The failure of the bank at O'Neill has brought distress and poverty upon a large number of people. Several old people had all their savings deposited in the bank and are left paupers in their old age. The public would like to know what the Nebraska bank examiners have been doing to allow such a state of affairs for several years as existed in that bank. But we may expect a good deal more of the same sort of thing during the next two or three years.
