

the earth. The putting of the right to control such movement in the hands of private parties is a curtailment of liberty, making a man to a certain extent a prisoner. Wherever attempted, it has worked wrong and resulted in oppression. There is only one possible settlement of the railroad question and that is public ownership.

Roosevelt Whipped

In everything that Roosevelt has tried to do he has been most disastrously whipped. He was going to have the fences put up by the great millionaires on the public land in the stock country taken down. They are there yet. His regulation of freight rates has been sent to a pigeon hole in a senate committee. There will be no tariff revision, no reciprocity treaties and no arbitration treaties. His defeat over the arbitration treaties was significant and disastrous. The senate not only defeated him but gave him a contemptuous kick or two after he was down, by way of private interviews given out to the dailies.

In a few days this congress will come to an end and not a thing has been done that was promised or advocated by the president. He promised the labor organizations that a law should be passed mitigating the rigors of government by injunction and that bill was treated with contempt by the house. The trusts are still in power, the railroads run things to suit themselves, the private car lines still exist, the refrigerator charges are the same, rebates are paid every day just as they have been for the last 25 years, the meat trust is doing business in the same old fashion and Roosevelt sits in the white house and glowers at the senate and that is all. He has been whipped. Will he now conclude to be good, or will he be put up a fight that will make the fur fly

Who Were Anarchists?

The extraordinary police precautions taken when the president dined on the east side in the Little Hungary restaurant has created a great uproar among the people there. They declare that the police treated them like anarchists, when the real anarchists were on the other side of the city among the millionaires, trust companies and corporations. The work of the police consisted of posting patrolmen at fire escapes and at each doorway and alley in East Houston street between avenue A and avenue B and streets adjacent thereto, the closing of the street to traffic and the concentration of the best half of the city's police force in the immediate vicinity of "Little Hungary." It was all a piece of imperial czarism and the crowd resented it. The people broke through the line of police and filled the street, every one declaring that he would give his life for the protection of the president.

Questions Answered

It is rather remarkable that in this age of materialism so many people are giving attention to Emerson's writings. A great many clubs in Nebraska this winter have been studying Emerson and some inquiries have come from the young people to the editor of The Independent concerning "Transcendentalism." As far as the editor knows, that word was never used by Emerson, but it was applied to his philosophy by others. Emerson recognized that there was a beauty, both of the soul and of material things, that could not be described in words. There is a charm about a sunset, when the clouds are aglow with colors that no painter could ever transfer to his canvas, there is "a something" about a beautiful life that no words can describe, there are visions that only the pure and the good can see, there is "a somewhat" everywhere that can only be felt and known. There is a charm surrounding some individuals that lingers long after the person has passed away, and in some persons, as that of Christ, that never passes away. That Emerson called "transcendancy." From that came the coining of the word "transcendentalism." This may serve as an answer to several inquiries.

C. W. Anderson of Hoskins, Neb., and E. W. Clossen & Co., of Sholes, Neb., had each a shipment of cattle on the South Omaha market on the 7th inst. and expressed themselves as highly pleased with their sales. Nye & Buchanan Co. made the sales.
