SUCCESS WITH GERANIUMS

At the mere mention of geraniums everyone exclaims they are so common. Yet we cannot get away from the fact that they are the standard house and bedding plants, because of their many shades of bright, cheerful colors, their free and continuous flowering habit and their ease of culture under varying conditions. Do not pot up geraniums more than one size at a time, for they will not bloom until root bound, besides there is danger of overwatering and rotting the roots when in larger pots than the roots can quickly fill. Many new varieties of geraniums are disseminated every year and a few of them prove to be meritorious. Foy geraniums have proved very useful for filling hanging baskets.

Pelargoniums, comonly called Martha Washingtons, when in full bloom are the most showy of all geraniums, but their flowering period is only during spring and early summer. The small flowering pelargoniums known as pansy geraniums come into bloom earlier, last later, and bloom much freer than the large flowering sorts.

These plants delight in a cool, dry air, and are, therefore, especially well adapted for the window.
