Repatee
 Professor Starr, the famous ethnologist, was in his humorous and whimsical way accusing woman of barbarism.
 "And she is not only barbarous—she is illogical and inconsistent!" he exclaimed.
 "I was walkink in the country one day with a young woman. In a grove we came upon a boy about to shin up a tree. There was a nest in the tree, and from a certain angle it was possible to see in it three eggs.

 "You wicked little boy," said my companion, "are you going up there to rob that nest?"
 "I am," the boy replied coolly.
 "How can you?" she exclaimed.
 "Think how the mother will grieve over the loss of her eggs."
 "Oh, she won't care," said the boy. "She's up there in your hat."

Forcible Argument
 The little man was expounding to his audience the benefits of physical culture.
 "Three years ago," he said, "I was a miserable wreck. Now, what do you suppose brought about this great change in me?"
 "What change?" said a voice from the audience.
 There was a succession of loud smiles, and some persons thought to see him collapse. But the little man was not to be put out.
 "Will the gentleman who asked 'What change?' kindly step up here?" he asked suavely. "I shall then be better able to explain. That's right."
 Then, grabbing the witty gentleman by the neck: "When I first took up physical culture I could not even lift a little man: now (suiting the action to the word) I can throw one about like a bundle of rags."
 And finally, he flung the interrupter half a dozen yards along the floor.
 "I trust, gentlemen, you will see the force of my argument and that I have not hurt this gentleman's feelings by my explanations."
 There were no more interruptions.

Self-Advertisement
 Mark Twain, at the dinner in honor of his seventieth birthday, advised a young novelist not to shun judicious self-advertisement.
 "On my first visit to New York," he said, "I was taken on a sight-seeing tour by a successful joke writer. I learned during this tour something about the way to succeed.
 "As we rode down Broadway on a car, my friend suddenly looked up from the comic paper he was reading, gave a hearty laugh, and then read aloud to me a joke.
 "Isn't that great?" he cried. "Oh, ha, ha, ha, ha! Isn't that the funniest joke—ho, ho, ho!—you ever heard?"
 "Just then we rose to get off. When we reached the sidewalk, I said to my friend:
 "You showed me that joke once before, you know. It is one of your own, isn't it?"

"He smiled at my puzzled face and answered:
 "Yes. But you didn't notice the man who sat opposite us, did you? He is the editor who buys most of my stuff, and he doesn't know me personally. See?"
