

Well Dressed Lincoln Men

LEAN ON ARMSTRONG'S FOR

Perfection in Ready-to-Wear Clothes

Because most men depend on somebody to tell them, either verbally or by example, what is correct to wear--because most men haven't time for the study of it, and perhaps less inclination.

With us the study of Men's styles is a business, because it means so much to us in dollars and cents. Mistakes are expensive--therefore we make no mistakes. You buy one, two, three, possibly four Suits a year, we buy hundreds. Isn't it natural we should be sure we're right before going ahead?

coming to regard consumption very differently from the way in which they did thirty or forty years ago.

There are indications that this remarkable experience is paralleled on a small scale with another disease which has caused much anxiety. Dr. Gaylord, of Buffalo, a leading American expert, has been for years experimenting with mice. He inoculates them with malignant tumors and then treats them for recovery. However, he declares that he has noted at least 101 cases in which the mice shook off the trouble without any remedy whatever. This circumstance leads "The Medical Record" of New York to cite an interesting statement about cancer in human subjects. It appears in an article by Drs. Gaylord and Clowes in "Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics," for June this year. Fourteen cases are there mentioned in which complete recovery without any help has been observed.

Their observations of inoculated mice lead these writers to suspect that spontaneous cure may be more frequent in human beings than is generally supposed. The interesting feature of their report, however, resides in the fact that there is, apparently, sufficient warrant to continue the search for an anti-cancer serum, for the occurrence of a spontaneous recovery indicates that some force is present, or may be generated in the body, which is capable of terminating the disease.
