WOMAN VAG-IN-OIDS

A specific for BARRENNESS, and if used according to directions BARRENNESS cannot exist. Perfectly harmless; can be used by the most delicate at any and all times.

IN CASES OF PROFUSE MENSTRUATION (flooding) it works like a charm, causing contraction of the blood vessels, so that the flow becomes perfectly natural, and can be safely applied to the patient while the monthly period is in existence.

IN CASES OF PAINFUL MENSTRUATION, caused by congestion and inflammation of the mouth or neck of the womb, a few applications will relieve this unnatural condition.

IN CASES OF PREGNANCY, it may be safely used up to the fifth month, thereby relieving the womb of its general inflamed and congested condition, consequently relieving the patient of more than one-half the suffering at child-birth.

CHANGE OF LIFE. In this case it is a wonderful remedy, relieving the organ of all morbid conditions that have been in existence for years. Its special action gives health and strength to the whole constitution, producing a healthy reaction of the whole nervous system. Cures nervous sick headache, pains in the back of the head, "nap of the neck," in fact any and all nerve pains. Price $1.00 per box, 3 for $2.50.

issippi river this winter, and that is the seining of carp and buffalo fish for the eastern market. The business has been reduced to something of a system, and once a week a carload of these fish is shipped to New York. It is common report here that in New York these fish are subjected to treatment and canned and sold as salmon. Whether or not this is true, the fish are being caught and shipped east. They are shipped as carp and buffalo fish, and what becomes of them after they reach the east does not interest the fishermen here, so long as they get good money for their fish.

It is only in comparatively recent years that the German carp has become a denizen of the Mississippi, but once introduced here it has bred rapidly, until it is now to be found in great numbers, all along the upper Mississippi. In fact, so rapid has been the spread of this fish that sportsmen have become somewhat alarmed lest it should clean out the more gamey and better specimens of fish in the river, such as the black bass and pickerel. The carp is said to be a voracious feeder and to live on smaller fish that come its way.

The permission to seine these fish and the ready market provided for them in the east is seeming to partially solve the problem as to how they shall be disposed of. In this seining the use of a net with not less than two and a quarter-inch mesh is required, and it is also required that the fishermen licensed to use the seine must throw back into the river any game fish that are captured in this manner.

Winona fishermen are just beginning to take up this industry, but along the Wisconsin side of the river there are some who have been following it for several months. A favorite seining ground over there is Trempeau bay. For the successful operation of seines still water is required, and this is found in the bay. The carp and buffalo fish run in size from five to twenty pounds, and the present market price that is paid for them is two cents a pound. Quite a number of persons who have been clamming during the summer expect to take up seining during the winter, as they believe they will find it more profitable than clamming.—St. Paul Dispatch.

STRANGE WHIM OF FATE

Curious Reuniting of Couple Separated by San Francisco Earthquake

A husband who believed his wife dead will be reunited with the woman who buried what she thought to be his body and wore her widow's weeds for months, when Mrs. Hattie Politz, who passed through Milwaukee recently on her way to Stockton, Cal., reaches her journey's end. By a whim of fate as strange as that which parted them their mourning has been ended.

It is one of the most remarkable of the stories which grew out of the San Francisco earthquake. At that time the Politz family—father, mother and two children—was living in San Francisco. Mrs. Politz and her husband were injured severely when the building in which they were living was wrecked by the earthquake, and were taken to different hospitals.

Mrs. Politz recovered slowly, and when she was strong enough to hear bad news they told her that one of her children had been killed. The other was with her. She asked about her husband and would not rest until she learned of his fate. She was told that his charred body had been found in their home.

With her child, the body of the other and what she believed was her husband's corpse, burned so badly that the features could not be recognized, Mrs. Politz started east for her old home in Shawano, Wis. She had the bodies buried in Oshkosh and took up her lonely life in Shawano.

Mrs. Politz has an interest in a ranch near Stockton, and some time ago wrote a ranchman who lived near it to make inquiries about it. In replying he told her there was a man living on it who said he was her husband, and told his neighbors that his wife had been killed in the San Francisco earthquake.

The wife made inquiries by telegraph and telephone, although at first believing the man was an imposter. The man on the ranch responded as eagerly, though incredulously. At last each became convinced that the other was alive, and Mrs. Politz started on her journey to her husband and her second honeymoon. Her husband, she learned, could find no trace of his family when he was discharged from the hospital and after long search, was forced to believe his wife and children dead. There is nothing to indicate whose body it was that Mrs. Politz brought east with her and buried at Oshkosh.—Chicago Record-Herald.

No Door for the Wolf

Tom—Well, darling, I have seen your father, and he has given his consent.

Grace—He approves of love in a cottage, then?

Tom—No; but he says that a girl who spends as much time golfing and motoring as you do really has not much need of a home.—Harper's Weekly.

Old Rameses had just completed the great canal between the Nile and the Red sea.

"Wonderful achievement," exclaimed the visitors; "what is the secret of your success?"

"Why," laughed old Rameses, "I lauded the man with the spade and beheaded the man with the muck rake."—Chicago News.
