SHOULD MEN BE CHLOROFORMED AT FIFTY?

Maryland Man States That Man Is Just In His Prime at Fifty

Ever since the famous Dr. Osler asserted that at fifty a man had outlived his usefulness and should be chloroformed, there has been a great deal of argument on exactly what age a man becomes feeble and useless.

Some men are this way at forty-two. Investigators, however, have just discovered the case of John Mann of Baltimore, Maryland. He is 55 years old and looks like a young man in his early forties. Hale and hearty with strong muscles and vigorous appetite, Mr. Mann was just married a year ago to a lovely woman. They are soon to have a baby to bless their union.

"I feel sorry for some of the men I see around me," said Mr. Mann on being interviewed. "Most of them younger than I am, and complaining of backaches, digestive trouble, weak vital organs, constipation, and heaven knows what not! Look at me! I'm as fit now, I believe, as when I was thirty. My wife thinks I'm every bit as good as any of the young bucks one sees around. It all comes from knowing how to take care of yourself. Nature meant a man should be in his prime at fifty! There's absolutely no excuse for a man losing strength at an early age, becoming weak, bilious, sluggish and making things miserable for both himself and his family.

When asked what system he used to keep himself so fit, Mr. Mann replied:

"I learned years back of a famous doctor's prescription called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Every man's liver, stomach and vital organs grow tired now and then and need to be stimulated back to proper action. Aiding nature, that's the trick. The stimulant that always stirred my system to new life when I got to feeling low-down was Syrup Pepsin. It always did the work thoroughly and helped me keep in shape the year around. I've always avoided strong cathartics and so-called blood and patent medicines."

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made of pure pepsin, active senna, and fresh laxative herbs. At any drug store, already bottled.

Advice to Lovelorn

"Dear Suzanne: I have a boy friend but don't know whether he loves me. How can I find out?" J. J.

By the way he treats you; by the attentions he pays you, and by the preference he shows for your company.

"Dear Suzanne: We have been going together steadily for a year. We are 19. Our parents think we are too young. Are we? A. and L." Do you mean too young to marry, or too young for steady company? To the former, I'd say yes; to the
