

"Y" NOTES

"Y" PLAYERS STUDY NEGRO DRAMA

Paul Green's "The Rider of Dreams" Eugene O'Neil's "No Count Boy" and Arthur Hopkins' "Moonshine" have been selected by the "Y" Players for their 1933 production. The casts include the Misses Mabel Longmeyer, Ollie Redd, and Elaine Smith and Messrs. Thomas Love, Forrester Scott, Alvin Wilkes, Henry Thomas, Eugene Murray and Z. E. McGee. Rehearsals are held weekly. Miss Helen Lehein of the Community Playhouse is the director. The "Y" Players have been scheduled to appear at the Community Playhouse in March 1933.

Cities like Chicago, Philadelphia, Washington, Cleveland and New York have organized dramatic groups solely for the purpose of developing an appreciation of Negro drama. The North Side "Y" is to be congratulated on its efforts.

"Y" ORGANIZED BASKET-BALL TEAM

A group of sixteen girls will hold its first Basket-Ball rehearsal on Saturday December 10th, at 6:00 P. M. in the Gym of the Central Y. W. C. A. Miss Madeline Shipman will coach this group. Any girl interested in Basket-ball and who wishes to join this group may do so by calling the North Side "Y". Those girls who are to play on Saturday are: Dell Lewis, Ruth King, Lucille Lane, Madeline Shipman, Louise Fletcher, Louise Scott, Hazel Tramble, Amanda Williams, Alma Bentley, Ferwilda Artison, Essie Porter, Doreene Holliday, Cleo Sayles, and Evelyn Battles.

"Johnny Horton's Political DOPE"

by John Benj. Horton, Jr.

No Beer for Xmas, Well Folks...

On previous occasions, this writer was accustomed to using his admittance card to the United States Senate Chamber in Washington at the opening of Congress; had he been there this year he would have rushed over to either Senator Norris' or Senator Royal S. Copeland's office to have his admittance card to the 72nd Congress exchanged for one for the 73rd Congress. Then, he would have hurried over to the House of Representatives and up in the gallery stand; and with an eagerness out of the ordinary, he would have heard these words from the lips of Speaker Garner, namely: "Two-thirds not having voted, the resolution is lost." once the count was completed, I'm telling you its mighty sad for us this year because everybody wished that Old Santa Claus would bring us BEER for Xmas.

The House rejected the Garner resolution for prohibition repeal Monday, the votes being 271 for repeal to 144 against. A two-thirds majority vote was necessary for approval of the resolution and, the necessary margin not having been delivered, the proposal was turned down. A change of six votes would have resulted in the repeal amendment's adoption.

One of the reasons that the resolution was rejected was that many "Lame Ducks" Congressmen, defeated for re-election, opposed the resolution. Congressman Howard Malcolm Baldrige and Congressman Malcolm Howard of this fair State of Nebraska were among those who had the courage of their convictions to vote for the repeal amendment.

No Political Party Can Cure Our Wounds!

Our troubles, politically, like most of our troubles, are inwardly and not outwardly—internally and not externally. The Negro has been bled to death by his own selfish and Venal political "would-be leaders". No political party can cure our wounds. Groups or races make their own advantages in this country; but these advantages do not make a group or Race in America.

In order to be taken seriously and be sought after as a really important intiger in the body politic of this nation, and to be considered as a power not only at election time but between elections, we must produce a new type of courageous political leadership because those who have led the race through all these years have not established a fitting nucleus for building genuine and undiluted pa-

BANANAS GROW UP-SIDE DOWN: Coffee Tree Is Evergreen.

Contrary to popular belief, bananas where the climate is temperate the year round. The cultivation of coffee is a high art in Colombia. Normally, the trees would grow to 14 to 20 feet in height, but Colombia experts keep them pruned to within 8 or 9 feet of the ground, this for improving the yield and for easy picking. For Colombian coffees are hand-picked, each ripe red "cherry" taken from the limb singly; the branches are not stripped of their fruit, as in some coffee-growing countries.

In Colombia, South America's northernmost country, both bananas and coffee grow in great abundance. While this thriving peaceful republic (the third largest country in South America) occupies third place in banana production, it is second in the production of coffee and first, by a wide margin, in the production and export of the finest grades of coffee.

Tempered Climate Best. Coffee culture in Colombia destroys another popular conception—the common belief that it grows best on the low hot plains of Equatorial countries, thriving on tropical sunshine at oppressive temperatures. This is not the case. The finest coffees are grown on the cool high mountain slopes of Colombia, 4,000 to 6,000 feet above the seatriotism. Most of our leaders, today, are individualists seeking their own selfish aims at the expense of all things important for the advancement of the common good.

The Negro Politicians and "would-be" leaders in most instances are the kind that believes in "getting their load," and I would call those types "Political Barons" who get fat, big and strong, and their followers (the people or masses) are "hot dog" fed political beggars.

Races and groups, especially the Negro of America, can not really become important as a great portion of the political strength of this nation, unless we have unselfish, sagacious and veracious leaders with a clean vision whose main duty should be to teach the masses the true values and the spirit of their greatest privilege and most important function as citizens of a great but none too liberal nation, that privilege being the ballot.

Writer's Note:—Watch this column every week and you'll read the truth exposed politically wherever warranted, regardless of political corrections.

Book Review

"DARK LUSTRE" by Geoffrey Barnes (Alfred H. King, Inc., New York City)

Not since I read Wallace Thurman's "Infants of the Spring" have I read a book that treats of Harlem life; illicit love affairs; drinking and debauchery; and the mixed emotions of soused literary and artistic characters as depicted in "Dark Lustre".

The author, Geoffrey Barnes, who, apparently, gained some renown as the writer of "Party Husband" (which I have not read) endeavors, in "Dark Lustre", to portray the reactions of a mixed love affair between Alan North, a writer with an inherited income and who spends his time proving that there is no such thing as prohibition and Aline Milton, a mulatto who is the direct result of a midnight liaison between an old Kentucky judge and his black housekeeper.

Aline has a rival for the affections of Alan in the person of Patricia (Peter) Brent, an artist who also enjoys an inherited income. Of course, Peter is white, beautiful and adorable. She wants Alans and wants him bad. In fact she literally throws herself upon Alan on any terms that Alan may desire but no, Alan, doesn't want Peter in that way and neither does he want to marry.

So, he goes to Harlem, meets Aline and spend such a hilarious night together that he finds himself in possession of a new apartment key and a willing maid awaiting him at all hours. The scores of other characters merely add to the general debauchery, if not the plot. —Clifford C. Mitchell.

"MOTHER SAYS SHE'S GLAD SHE HAD A TELEPHONE WHEN I FELL INTO THE TUB"

This actual incident shows how one call may be worth more than a telephone costs in a lifetime!

That's what this baby would want to tell you if he understood how the telephone brought the doctor so quickly that day he fell into a tub of water.

His mother was doing the family laundry and had gone outdoors for a few moments. When she returned she found the baby nearly drowned.

She telephoned the doctor at once. He came in time to save the baby's life. No wonder she wouldn't be without a telephone now!

Any moment some emergency may arise —the home with a telephone is protected—help can be called at once . . .
