"Maxie Miller Writes"

(for Literary Service Bureau) Best Girl Friend Takes "Honey Boy" Forsaken wants to Kill 'Em—No use Cussin'—Beter Lose Him Now "Before Taking" than "After Taking" (for advice, write to Maxie Miller, care of The Literary Service Bureau, 516 Minnesota Ave., Kansas City, Kansas. For personal reply send self addressed, stamped envelope.)

MAXIE MILLER:—

I'm up against it and you got to help me out. Better do it quick or I might do something terrible. Here's the case. I got in love with a boy. We got engaged to marry. I introduced him to my best girl friend, and then she sneaks and takes him away from me. True, she says she won't marry him less I give him up, but she laugh and say if I keep his body she got his heart. Sometimes I feel like killing both of them. I wonder what you'd say I had ought to do. Tell me quick—Forsaken.

Forsaken:—There's no use "cussin' an can take a man unless he is willing to "be took"; so there you are. If this boy wants the other girl he doesn't want you, and you ought to have too much pride to want him. What would it mean to marry him if he didn't want you? You'd lose him, after all. It seems this man is unstable and not dependable, and you are fortunate to "lose" him now. Pull yourself together and wish him on the other girl. Be sensible and wait for a better love to come.

—MAXIE MILLER.

(For the Literary Service Bureau)

MAXIE MILLER:—I am twenty years old, have been married, have a child and am separated from my husband. I love a boy twenty and he seems to care a good deal for me. But at times he gets careless and acts like he doesn't care so much. He never asked me to marry him, but he has said he's jealous of me and talks of me as his future wife. I never see him with any other girl. When I was away he wrote letters to me all the time. I do everything to please him, and I want to marry him. How can

I settle this matter? Tell me, please. —VICK.

Vick:—Your last statement seems to shed light on the situation. Perhaps you do too much 'to try to please him.' Perhaps you go too far and make yourself common. Perhaps you reveal your desire too plainly. Evidence is that the boy cares for you but proves it rather by actions than by gushing, such as most women foolishly desire. Take yourself in hand. Be more conservative. Make things a little uncertain for him; and maybe he will become more ardent when you slow down on your own demonstration. Men are queer things. They like to hunt and kill their game, not to find it DEAD!

—MAXIE MILLER.

BROKEN HOMES (For the Literary Service Bureau)

Press reports told of investigation into juvenile vice in Houston. In regard to the public schools, one of the investigators said, "Visits to the school showed fine conduct on the part of the 6,000 pupils there." Then came the significant statement, "Those children involved in the investigation came, in the main, from broken homes."

There was no definition of what constitutes a broken home, but it must mean defective homes in which influences are not wholesome and helpful. Broken homes or defective homes are due to many conditions, including, laxness in the conduct of parents; incompatibility and constant wrangling; lack of provision on the part of the father and lack of supervision on the part of the mother; lack of discipline and criminal indulgence; separation and divorce depriving children of the care of both parents and the proper educational and cultural advantages.

Yes, all of these weaknesses and others are responsible for "broken homes," and they, in their turn are responsible for errancies which become chronic and end in moral turpitude. And it is sad to contemplate at children from these broken homes are to be the parents of the next generation. In this statement we have the cause of much of the trouble, and a warning of the menace to the well-being of the nation.

HARBINGERS by R. A. ADAMS (For the Literary Service Bureau)

The harbinger, courageous bold, Like prophets true, in days of old, Unto Jehovah's chosen few—

The arrogant, apostle Jew, Urge: "Turn from all your sins today, And for the Lord prepare the way."

The people cast their garments down, And strew palm branches on the ground,

Crying, "Hosanna, blessed is He Who comes, the world from sin to free;"

Then, as in reverence they bow, "Jehovah, save Thy people, now!"

So, as we now commemorate These great events, and contemplate The sins of this unrighteous age, Behooves us in prayer to engage, Then, like the harbinger, to cry: "Repent; God's Kingdom draweth nigh."
