My Trip to Arkansas

Leaving Omaha May 4 for a motor trip through Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, it was indeed refreshing—aft r long winter and a dry April to run into spring showers at Plattsmouth, lasting almost through the entire trip. Gardens were up and fresh vegetables were plentiful in Arkansas, we found an abundance of strawberries. Scores of black and white pickers, could be seen in the fields and on inquiring as to the pay we were told that the pickers receive one cent a quart. This may seem to be small pay, but when it is considered these berries sell on the market for five cents a quart the pal is liberal. Cotton was being chopped and hay harvested. There was little idleness to be seen. We were told that the depression had been seriously fit as in other sections of the country, but that the new deal was in effect among the Negroes as well as the whites. Yet the E. A. C. (EMERGENCY ADVISORY COUNCIL) and the Urban League had never been heard of: Roosevelt, Rosenwald and Dillinger were their National Heroes.

Bert Moore's News Column

Hello Folks—Some of us had a good time, some a sad one, some went fishing, some went to picnics, and some to various other entertainments. Some automobiles ran out of gas, and some ran out of the roads, some people were killed and some were injured on the Fourth of July. Here are the records of the Fourth of July fatalities. 175 people were killed in the United States, 10 less than in 1933, only two by fireworks, drowning claimed a few, but traffic accidents had the heaviest toll. In the United States, the fiscal year, ending June 30, over 30,000 were killed by autos, and over one million injured.

printed in the north. Many of our silver-tongued orators depicting the white people living in rural districts of the south as fiends in human form who bully and brow beat the Negro and that the Negro is not permitted to drive a decent car through their community.

The people with whom we came in contact with seemed to possess as much kindness and brotherly love as is shown in any part of the country; according to the standards and customs of the nation. The south has always been noted for its spirit of friendliness and true to this sentiment the people in the rural districts of the south in which we traveled were far more friendly to strangers regardless of color or creed than the people in the rural districts of the north. There is none of that superficial pretended friendliness that is so often compelled to show because of the customs of the laws of that particular state. This positivity is not true of the south, courtesy is extended voluntarily you feel a genuine sincerity that none but a Christian heart could express.

Entering Oklahoma at Enid, then passing through Kingfisher, El Reno, the most over-advertised Negro town in the world) the truth about it will be told in our future letters. Continuing our trip we spent that night in Sallisaw, Oklahoma; arriving at Fort Smith, Arkansas; in the morning we proceeded south through the state along highway No. 71 by way of Greenwood; Huntington; Mansfield; Tullahoma (a Negro village) then through Menas; Foreman; Nashville and Fulton returning to Hot Springs. Maxie Miller Writes

(For The Literary Service Bureau)

Husband out of work—wife thinks of selling her womanhood to "get things"—BETTER NOT. Mary Mack—better try to help in the crisis—"wait till the clouds roll by."

(For advice, write to Maxie Miller, care of Literary Service Bureau, 516 Minnesota Avenue, Kansas City, Kansas. For personal reply send self addressed stamped envelope.)

Maxie Miller: I am married but my husband's been out of work a long time. He is kind to me and he'd work if he had it. Sometimes he says he's ashamed of himself because he can't make cash of me, and he couldn't blame me if I'd get things some other way. Do you think he means it, and do you think it would be so bad when we are so poor and needy?—Mary Mack.

Mary Mack: You'd be a mean, selfish, ungrateful wife to do the thing you suggest. If your husband is kind, as you say, and would work if he could, you'd be an ingrate and a fool to "step out on him." No, he does not mean it. No man would sanction a thing like that, and I am supposing that your husband is a MAN. The best thing is for you to try to help in this crisis and to make yourself satisfied with what you have until conditions improve, as they must, and surely will Maxie Miller
