BY VIDETTA ISH (For The Literary Service Bureau)

(Children and the Church Service) Children used to go to church. remember a family all the children of which attended the church services It was the "Foote family." It was the usual thing to see father, mother and all seven of the children on the way to church. A comment was "Here come the Footes with all their little feet." But, today, as a general thing, children do not attend church services. Thousands of them go to Sunday School and yet "pass up" the church. In the light of youthful errancies, juvenle crme, and the growng indifference toward religion, it is reasonable to conclude that there is intimate relationship between this condition and he fact that so few young people attend church and hear the gospel. Considerng all of these one is inclined to quote the warning, "Re- the Pullman Porters and Maids Promove not the landmark by the fath- tective Association, which is the same
