To the Omaha Guide: Dear Sirs:

For a long time I have been planning to write and tell you how much Godfroy's dye has done for my hair. I first started using Godfroy's through your paper. I saw the advertisement in your paper and I tried it, and I have been very well pleased ever since. I know lots of other women, and men too, who started to use Godfroy's by seeing the ad in the Omaha Guide.

ter, returning home on October 29th, found Mrs. Bertha Bradshaw, who was placed under a restraining order last week for threatening the life of Mrs. Willis, in bed with Mrs. Willis's sweetheart. A fight ensued.

Mrs. Willis stated that if Mrs. Bradshaw were lying in the gutter dying, she wouldn't shake hands with her. The case will be continued for thirty days, due to the restraining order.

If you have anywhere to go, start earlier. Haste makes waste. If you are late, it's better late than never.

NRA HIGHLIGHTS

(Continued from page 1) A general Code Authority was recently created to supervise the operation of "basic" codes in these industries which do not require Code Authorities of their own. This group has now been placed in charge of the retail solid fuel code. It will function until the industry can elect a new Code Authority to take the place of the old one which resigned recently because NRA required that minimum prices could not become effective until submitted to headquarters for review in the consumer's interest. The General Code Authority is headed by Dr. Willard Hotchkiss, president of the Armour Institute of Technology. Other members include Father Francis J. Hass, of the Labor Advisory Board; Stacy May, of the Consumers' Advisory Board; deLancey Koutz of the Industrial Advisory Board.

A Break for Vaudevillians. Performers appearing in movie theaters must be paid at least the code minimum of $7.50 a day, regardless of the number of performances they give, NRA has just ruled. The Motion Picture Code, while providing this minimum, says nothing about the number of performances, and the Code Authority reported that in some cases, actors are being paid per performance or were appearing in more than one theatre a day and receiving less than the minimum.

shy. Everyone seemed to enjoy the evening to the utmost.

We wondered why Willie Wainright didn't display his musical talent, and why Mose Ransome didn't display his golden baritone or tenor (which is it?) voice when they were called upon? Mose went away with a basket, but the Trojan decorations were still on the wall. What was in that basket Mose?

All the Trojans had torches made of taffy apples. Our guests wondered why all the Trojans had apples and they didn't. Well, the Trojans had to hold their torches high so some weary traveler might see their way. That's why.

Well, we'll see you next week. Roberta Pharr, Reporter.

SOCIAL SINS

BY A. G. BEARER (For The Literary Service Bureau)

Text: He that keepeth company with harlots spendeth his substance,—Prov. 29:3.

Prostitution has been falsely called "a necessary evil." It is not that, but it is one of the most ancient evils, and one of the most destructive evils.

1. Destructive to Womanhood. The life of a prostitute is said to average about ten years. The ranks must constantly be refilled, who are made a prey to the lust of men, and who are deceived and decoyed into a life of shame. It destroys their bodies, their characters and their souls.

2. Effect on Manhood. In prostitution men waste their precious strength in sex indulgence. They waste their money needed for better purposes. By means of venereal diseases they dissipate their strength, wreck their bodies and die prematurely.

3. Hereditary Effects. The direful effects of this chief among social sins does not end with the individual nor with his generation. Many prostitutes become mothers and many liberties become fathers. In this way the moral weaknesses are passed on down to posterity. But the worst phase of the situation is the hereditary effect of venereal diseases; especially syphilis called the "black plague." By this means the curse goes coursing down "from generation to generation."

4. Responsibility. The responsibility rests largely upon men. The women are betrayed or bribed by men. They are held in these places for men. They are used to satisfy the lust of men. Officials of the law who condone and even protect this nefarious business are men. And to God men must answer for this social sin which is destructive beyond all computation.
