REDUCTION IN WORKING HOUR WEEK

Green Presents Views Calling for A Maximum of 30 Hours

A demand for a 30-hour week was presented by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and supported by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America; the Reverend Father Francis J. Haas, of the National Catholic School of Social Service; Miss Rose Schneiderman, president of the National Women's Trade Union League; David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union; Arthur O. Wharton, president of the International Association of Machinists; Francis J. Gorman, international first vice president of the United Textile Workers of America, and others.

Leading off the list of speakers, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said: "The achievements of the NRA have been many. * * * It has demonstrated the basic soundness of bringing about reemployment through the shortening of hours, of increasing the aggregate purchasing power through minimum wage provisions and of eliminating some of the worst features of cut-throat competition."

Supports 30-Hour Bill

"The American Federation of Labor is this year supporting with all strength at its command the Black-Connelly bill, providing for a 30-hour week. It is taking this action primarily because the recovery program has not fulfilled what labor considered its two primary purposes—a reduction in the hours of work sufficient to absorb at least a majority of the unemployed, and an increase in mass purchasing power sufficient to create a market for the products of industry and to give the workers of this country the minimum goods and services to which any human being is entitled."

"I submit first of all that a drastic reduction in the hours of work fixed by the Codes must be made, if we are to meet our problem of unemployment * * * Until we solve it, we can hope for little in the way of recovery. * * * I believe sincerely that the adoption of the 30-hour week in Codes of fair competition would solve this problem, would return to industry the major portion of our unemployed and would be the first step in the creation of the purchasing power which is essential to recovery."

Answering a question by Blackwell Smith, counsel and ex-officio board member, as to how a drastic limitation of hours, with compensating pay increase, would effect unit cost of production, Mr. Green said:

"We have shifted from the 12-hour day to the 10-hour day and from the 10-hour day to the 8-hour day, and, strange and contradictory as it may seem, we have reduced unit costs as we have shifted. * * * Because of the efficiency of the worker developed during the shorter work week, and the resourcefulness of management, we will find within a very short time that the unit cost of production will be decreased rather than increased."
