Police Arrest Writers Investigating Southern Conditions

Birmingham, Ala. — (CNA) — With undisguised effrontery, the police arrested and held for several hours three members of a delegation of writers organized by the National Committee for the Defense of Political Prisoners to fight for the repeal of anti-Negro and anti-labor legislation in the South.

Chief of Police Luther Hollums warned the delegation that if it did not leave town immediately he would not be responsible for its future safety.

Prominent Delegates Those arrested were Bruce Crawford, formerly editor of Crawford's Weekly, at Norton, Virginia; Shirley Hopkins, of Truro, Massachusetts, author of a book of poems; and Al Hirsch, writer and secretary of the N. C. D. P. Miss Hopkins and Crawford were fingerprinted, and Hirsch was cuffed by a policeman for refusing to answer questions.

The Downs "seditious literature" ordinance of Birmingham and the Georgia slave "insurrection" law under which Angelo Herndon was convicted are the two immediate pieces of legislation against which the delegation hopes to arouse wide-spread public opinion for re-elimination from the statute books.

Frame Militants Both laws have been used by officials acting in concert with wealthy white landlords and industrialists to frame militant Negro and white laborers who sought to organize against the wage and relief cutting offensives.

Hollums told the delegation that he would not guarantee them protection against the "gangs" in Birmingham. By "gangs" is meant the White Legion and other fascist groups.

"We can't control these gangs," he said. The implication was plain that the police would leave an attack on the delegation to the extra-legal fascist groups.

Despite these intimidations, the delegation has announced that it will continue its fight with renewed activity.

Describes Joe Louis As a Factor For Social Good

Chicago, Aug. 14, (ANP)—Is Joe Louis, the sensational heavyweight prize fighter conscious of the dual role he must play in life, one a role as a pugilist which he eagerly sought; the other, a role as ambassador for the uplift of his people?

The burden of holding up the good name of his race is a greater load to be foisted onto the shoulders of a 21-year-old boy than an entire flock of present day heavyweights would be. Joe has captured the imagination of the American public. Through him, white Americans see a type of Negro they did not suspect existed. We know that there are many like him: But Joe has got the chance to show.

Will he take the responsibility to heart? Is it too much to expect of a boy of his years? Not only millions of Negroes are wondering if the CHARACTER of Joe Louis, now that his fists have drawn attention to him, will continue to hold his race up, but also millions of whites. Their hearts have been drawn to this unassuming colored boy. Thus he has all classes in America looking to him. He is a model for white boys as well as colored boys—as long as he does not forsake the "character" created for him in the public imagination.

The following editorial from the Chicago Herald-Examiner calls pointed attention to the position Joe Louis occupies as a young citizen of the United States:

"THE CASE OF JOE LOUIS" "In the history of the world few boys of 21 have had the opportunity to express themselves as social factors that today lies in the lap of young Joe Louis.

"A year ago today he was an automobile mechanic in Detroit. Today, throughout the civilized world, he is discussed as a possible world-champion boxer.

"Whether or not he ever attains that goal, he has impressed himself upon the imagination of millions as an example of clean living and UNEMOTIONAL behavior.

"Neither Haile Selassie, nor any of the black ancient rulers of the Rome that now menace him, ever had such a following of loyal friends and well-wishers as the bronze Apollo.

Twelve million Americans of his racial descent idolize him. Other millions, including Cabots and Lowells, admire his technique and are willing to wager that in a tour of Europe he can destroy the ambitions of any hairy giant that the old countries can produce.

"From the depth of South African diamond mines to the remotest igloo of the Arctic circle—thanks to radio—the name of Louis was on the lips of every human yesterday.

"The world's spotlight is on him—not so much because he defeated a hard-fighting and good-looking Chicagoan in Levinsky—but because he appears to be a man of destiny in a game that at best is sordid business.

"Prize fighting is brutal, as any participant or devotee will admit. Whether it is degrading is another question. If it is such, then a poll of ringsiders at any good match might destroy the public's faith in its leaders—political, industrial and professional.

"But back to Joe Louis. If he can hold the poise, restraint and decency of personal conduct that he has shown thus far in his brief career he may do as much for his race as the great Booker T. Washington accomplished.

"While he is the idol he will be imitated. If he slips from the picture of a Bible-reading, fiddle-playing mother's boy he will be followed.

"Joe Louis has the respect of millions of men and women today. May he hold it."

Along with the white editor of the Herald-Examiner, Joe's brethren in blood are also praying, "May he hold it."

Boston Protests Attacks on Ethiopia

Boston, Mass., (CNA)—A Negro and white delegation representing the Provisional Committee for Equal Opportunities registered a vigorous protest with the Italian Consulate here today against the war upon Ethiopia. The consul received the protest from the chairman but refused to receive or hear the delegation, stating "the Consulate has nothing to do with the war and is here for other business."

The chairman of the delegation Richard B. Moore, Boston organizer of the International Labor Defense, protested against "the unprecedented violation of established diplomatic procedure and courtesy by refusing to receive and hear a delegation desiring to transmit a protest to your government." Dr. S. G. Pavlo, S. Calderaro, Dr. M. Cravath Simpson, and Mrs. Mary Moore were the other members of the delegation.

The statement left for transmission to the Italian government "protests vehemently against the invasion and slaughter of the Ethiopian people," condemns "the vicious propaganda which is being employed to justify this war of conquest by slandering the Ethiopian people, who achieved a high state of civilization in the earliest historic period as 'savages,' 'and demands' the withdrawal of all troops and the recognition and observance of international treaties solemnly guaranteeing the independence of Ethiopia and outlawing wars of aggression."

Woman Shot; Pulls Ball Out Of Skull

Scotland Neck, N. C., Aug. 14, (ANP)—Fellow-revellers at a party expected to see Ethel Lawrence fall over lifeless when G. B. Richardson in a fit of anger pulled his pistol and fired point-blank in her face, but instead they saw her stagger, clasp her hand to her forehead and a minute later cast the bullet on the floor. The bullet had embodied itself in the skull of the woman just above the eye and did not penetrate the brain, hence she was able to pluck it out without assistance. Medical aid was given at a doctor's office and the woman's condition has been reported as satisfactory. Richardson escaped following the shooting.

Visits Friend In Jail; And Stays

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 14, (ANP)—Finding a razor in the package she was carrying to a friend in jail led to the incarceration of Eliza Harris, here Tuesday afternoon. The woman was one of the afternoon visitors at the jail and as she was entering the cell row to see Harvey Stephenson, who was charged with being drunk and disorderly a razor fell out of the package she was carrying and clattered upon the floor. She told the jailer that she knew that Harvey needed a shave and that a white woman had sent him the razor and some pickles, but this explanation was not sufficient to keep her from becoming an inmate until the case was investigated.
