D. G. CCC COMPANY ENROLLS FORTY-TWO IN NIGHT SCHOOL CLASSES

The night school program initiated last year at CCC Company 1360, assigned to the National Arboretum at Washington, D. C., got off to a good start last week. Forty-two boys of the company have enrolled for various night classes. Two Government trucks are provided on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings each week after the evening meal to transport them from 28th and M streets N. E. to the Corzodo High School, about three miles away. This was one of the projects to which Robert Bell, the new colored educational adviser and his assistant, John W. Edwards, has given their attention during the two weeks since they were appointed. Adviser Bell will continue to serve the colored CCC camp at Alexandria, seven miles out of Washington, where he has been for the last year. Mr. Bell is a graduate of Virginia State University, where he majored in physical education. The night school program at Company 1360 was initiated last year by the commanding officer, Captain Moore, in cooperation with Assistant Superintendent Wilkerson.

CCC CAMP IN PENNSYLVANIA HONORS LATE COLONEL CHARLES YOUNG

Civilian Conservation Corps Company 315, at Medix Run, Pennsylvania, has honored the late Colonel Charles Young by designating the site "Camp Young." Colonel Young a graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, at one time commanded one of the troops of the famous Tenth Cavalry and at the time of his death was military attaché of the United States in Liberia. Senior Leader Cornwall B. Florence of Company 315 last week received the Gold Bar, an honorary award of this CCC company, for his contributions to the success of the unit during the past six months. The members of the company have voted him the camp's most alert, energetic and progressive enrollee. Leaders George Caldwell and Thomas Thompson were the recipients of the Silver Bar award for voluntary and meritorious service over and above the regular demands of duty. During their spare time this summer they constructed a stone walk along the west side of the camp which not only adds to the aesthetic setting of the camp plan but also contributes to the convenience of every member of the company. They were assisted at different times by enrollees, Frank Henry, Robert Lane, Robert Pittman, LeRoy Yuppille, Rufus Morgan, LeRoy Reeves, John Minor and all the truck drivers. These awards, which are purely local in character, were presented by Captain George Griffith, commanding officer, and Lieutenant William R. Taube.

COL. J. C. ROBINSON FEARS FAST BOMBERS OF THE ITALIAN ARMY

Addis Ababa, Oct. 12—(ANP)—Special Correspondence—"If we have to face the Italians in our present planes, airworthy though they are, it will be no less than murder," wrote Col. J. C. Robinson, former Chicago aviator now holding a high position with the royal air forces, to friends his back in the States a few days before the Italians began their formal invasion of Ethiopia. "We have planes capable of flying and flying well, besides those chiefly used for training purposes, but they are of ancient vintage and as slow as snails in comparison with modern Italian planes," he went on.

So positive was Robinson of the inadequacy of the air forces that he discouraged the dozen flyers and mechanics belonging to the Challenger Pilots Association in Chicago to follow him over.

"I shall stay here and deliver everything there is in me, but there is no reason for you to go down to death with me," the flyer who supplanted Hubert Julian told his friends. "It will be better for you to remain in America and carry on the good work which we have begun in interesting the Negro in aviation."

Typical of Conditions

Conditions in the air squadron are typical of those existing in the other branches of the defense forces. Nearly 2,000,000 Ethiopians are under arms—but they are so far inferior to the equipment possessed by the thousands of Italian soldiers as to make all comparisons odious. It is really little more than determination and man power against a mechanized army.

Against almost unlimited Italian armaments, Abyssinia has an estimated 50,000 new Mauser rifles, 560,000 rifles of all types, some dating back before the victory over the Italians in 1896; 40 usable cannon, 12 three inch trench mortars, 16 anti-tank guns that have been converted into anti-aircraft guns, 6 mountain guns, 700 Hotchkiss machine guns, about 599 heavy machine guns, about 100 Colt and Browning automatic rifles and about 800 hand grenades.

Impart Little Knowledge

Whites have been hired to give modern training to the unlearned Ethiopian, but many of them now in important posts know little of their jobs or else refuse to impart more than a modicum of knowledge. Many whites have bribed influential Ethiopians in order to get the jobs they hold which does not make for efficiency. Even the trained white who gets in will stall and stall for months, neither trying to improve conditions nor teach his pupils, being content merely to draw his salary at a minimum of effort.

It takes students years to learn in the air corps what could be picked up in a few months under efficient standards. Some students who have been in the service five years are as yet unable to inspect an airplane, a preliminary to flying.

Hostilities, however, are expected to remove considerable of this ineffective foreign influence. There is much resentment against the French, whom the natives here consider as adopting an attitude of passive support of Italian invasion. The Greeks and Armenians, who have behaved like Simon Legrees toward colored people once they rose to power, will come under the same disaster.

Learn Readily

But when instructors conscientiously fulfill their obligations, they find the Ethiopian an apt and eager pupil. Swedish, Turkish, German and other European military experts have taught willing Ethiopians the craft of indirect fire, ballistics, parabolas and the handling of mountain artillery. But the chief difficulty has been a lack of ammunition enabling the momeians, who have behaved liked students to actually work out their teachings.

Recently the emperor went daily to the old palace to supervise rearming of soldiers from the interior, who passed through this city with their chiefs at the rate of 500 to 1,500 daily. When a present of a rifle was made to an individual soldier, that soldier would kiss the ground in gratitude for the gift. But guns and ammunition have always been highly valued. From boyhood up, Ethiopians have been taught to make every bullet count. For that reason it is believed little of the sparse supply of ammunition will be wasted.

Italy Needs Native Troops?

Over and against this, however, it the Ethiopian familiarity with every inch of defensible terrain, the terrific heat and lack of water faced by Italians, as well as a myriad of other resources. Rome officially admitted 130 soldiers died from the intense heat and tropical diseases in East Africa between January 1 and July 31—which probably means the real figure was several times that amount. An estimated 1,000 were incapacitated weekly.

Military experts generally concede Il Duce is making a mistake by hurling Italian born soldiers against the Ethiopians. It took France 20 years to complete the "pacific" of Morocco, and the Riff neither personally nor geologically presented near the same difficulty as does the Ethiopian. France had native soldiers, born and reared under conditions constantly faced by any soldier attempting to subdue the Riffs. Furthermore she had more money and manpower, yet it took her two decades to finally tame the Riffs who cannot at all be compared with the East African native of this area.

Barrages, Massed Attacks Mainly Useless

Barrages, massed ground attacks by tanks and soldiers, as well as bombing by planes can seldom be indulged in. They have a high sounding name, appear terrifying, and made a great show but it is in only a few instances that they can be effective. The land is not thickly populated; few cities exist. There are countless caves and hideouts. Naturally a hidden enemy can't be bombarded. It is generally concluded the Ethiopians will be at their best in guerrilla warfare and snipping and will make little attempt to invite annihilation by open battle. The French who fought in Morocco tell of fighting as long as six weeks without seeing a single Riff, yet suffering casualties before Italy, for all her superior. So scattered did they fight that the French were lucky if a six inch high explosive shell got even one man. And no government can afford to continue firing shells costing $100 each that do nothing except dig holes in the ground.

Even with no other nation becoming involved, from the experiences of other European powers it would take several decades before Italy, for all her superior armaments, could ever hope to completely subdue all of unprepared Ethiopia, most observers readily agree.
