Italy is rejoicing over her "victory" on the northern front in Ethiopia but close observers have noted her setback in the south Arnaldo Cortesi, writi ngshr eta New York Times from Rome, just cial war bulletin contains the first admission of a setback that the Italian staff has made since the beginning of the last African campaign. It states that on Feb. 10 an Italian garrison of sixty Dubats (native troops) at Curati, described as an observation post in the south, was attacked by considerance."

It is noticeable that Italy readily issues statements of "victories" when the Roman populace beof an overwhelmig Ethiopian dethe northern commander, Bodag- to lio, was "ill" and might be "called home."

Negroes throughout America and the colored peoples throughout the world, need not fear for Ethiopia's cause. Her mountains and deserts and the will to be free of her inhabitants have combined to make that the oldest and largest free country in Africa.
