I give you fair warning. You'll want a three-piece suit for fall, especially if you are going to school. Anytime is the right time—any place the right place for a tweed suit with casual coat that is smart "on its own." The two-piece belted suit may be worn as a dress with a han-rolled tie silk scarf.

For afternoon there is a wool dress with zippers at sides and wrists, a leather throng at the neckline and a wide quilted belt, very smart.

For evening the new princess frocks in satin are lovely. They have molded bodice and waistline, the flaring skirt and the moderately broadened shoulders. It is one of the big fashions for fall. HATS: Berets are ever popular. Wear them pushed way back to show off your pompadour or drape them dashingly to one side.

To strengthen the whole system against the weakening effects of the changes that take place in MIDDLE LIFE

Good strength is always important, but it is of special importance during the change of life when the body needs the very best nourishment to fortify it against the changes that are taking place. Increased nervous irritability and the distressing symptoms that appear in middle life all need treatment with a view of making the woman as comfortable as possible. To combat poor nourishment and nervous fatigue, Cardul has real usefulness because it is a bitter tonic and stomachic which stimulates the appetite and increases the amount of gastric juice. In this way, digestion is aided, thus favoring more complete transformation of food into living tissue, resulting in improved nutrition and the consequent building up and strengthening of the whole system. Cardul is a liquid medicine, sold in 9-ounce bottles, with full directions for use.
