Johann Strauss, Jr. Although there are many beautiful compositions written daily, none seem to survive as long as those written by the famous old compsers. To become acquainted with these old masters thraugh books and study increases one interest in their music two-fold.

Such a fact is true of Johann Johann was born in Vienna, October 5, 1825. He was the son of a successful composer and conduct. or. In fact the father was one of the first to produce a waltz style com- burst into song. Then she got out position which leaped into popular of the coffin and walked away. Be-

Johann learned to play the violin despite his fathers objections to having him become a professional musician, and become a more noted conductor and a composer of great ter renown than his father. Following his fater's death, he united his own and his father's orchestra and after an extensive European tour and other engagements, including ten years of summer concert conducting at a park in Petrograd, he became the conductor of court balls in Vienna, the same position in which his father had functioned.

"The Waltz King," as he was called visited the United States in 1872 and his concerts in Boston and New York were tremendous successes.

Altoget' r he wrote around five hundred compositions. His "Beautiful Blue Danube," "Roses from Johann Straus died in Vienna, June 3, 1889. Although he died almost fifty years ago, his compostions are heard every day on the stage radio or in our schools and dance orchestras.

Friends Startled As "Dead" Woman Rises

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 26 (PFS)-In hushed tones natives here tell the incrtdible tale of Mrs. Charlotte Jones, who came back to life from the very edge of the grave. The Negress, aged ninety, so the story goes, after having been pronounced dead and prepared for burial, rose from the coffin fifteen hours later and began singing hymns while terrified spectators took to their heels.

Mrs. Jones "died" Thursday. According to hot country custom, her body was placed in a coffin packed Strauss, jr., and his lovely waltzes. with ice. Relatives and friends sat about a room in her home in a death watch.

At midnight the "dead" woman suddenly sat bolt upright and lieve it or not.
