Arthur's "Round Table" Is Lure of Tourists

Winchester, Eng. — King Arthur's Round Table is still one of the attractions which bring tourists to this city, if one may judge from the number of visitors this last summer. The fact that Winchester is more truthfully the city of Alfred the Great, or that it has one of the finest cathedrals of England, seems to mean less than the fact that in the old castle hangs a "wheel of fortune," known as King Arthur's Round Table.

The table here was first mentioned by the poet Hardy in 1378, and Henry VIII brought the Emperor Charles V to see it when Charles visited England in 1522, proudly displaying it as one of the most interesting sights in England.

He has just returned from Washington with information and suggestions as to how the examinations are to be conducted. The examination office will be maintained at Room 414, Main Building, Nebraska Wesleyan university.

The examination and operation of this merit system is under the supervision of an Advisory Board. The members of the Advisory board will take absolutely no part in selecting employees for this division. The board is on record that it will assure to all applicants qualified and impartial examination and examining board. Regulations shall be applied impartially, with freedom of political influence and justice to all citizens of the State of Nebraska. It is the firm opinion of the Board that the merit system will assure to the State, an efficient, loyal personnel and to the personnel, an opportunity to be of service to the State with proper reward for loyal and sincere service. Employment will not be affected by changes in political fortunes, but will be permanent except for dismissal for cause." The examinations are conducted on a merit basis as is required the
