TELLTALE LIGHTS AID SAFETY AT SEA

Latest Lighthouse Equipment Proves Efficient. Washington, D. C.—"Self-announcing" lighthouses and lightships that tell the mariner just how close he is approaching them, even when a pea-soup fog shuts them from view, make up the latest equipment of the United States lighthouse service in its fight for greater safety at sea. "The vital element of this recent contribution to safer navigation, now coming into wide use, is a combination of signals which tells the navigator his distance from dangerous reefs or shoals," says the National Geographic society. "Twenty-nine stations sending such signals, scattered along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts from West Quoddy Head, near Eastport, Maine, to the Southwest pass of the Mississippi river, recently participated in the most elaborate demonstration of their use ever arranged. They operated continuously during daylight hours to give all passing ships the opportunity to test out the new method, and judge of its accuracy.

Danger in Fog. "In the stress of making harbor in a fog, shipmasters are too concerned to rely on an unfamiliar method. The tests by distance-finding observations were made in good weather and in daylight because it was realized that, when the accuracy of the new method was immediately revealed by bearings taken from visible landmarks, mariners would gain enough confidence in the signals to rely on them later when fog would obscure the station sending them.

"When approaching land in fog it is often possible to hear sound fog signals from a lighthouse or lightship; yet, because of the vagaries of sound traveling through fog, the hearer may be unable to determine with any accuracy his distance from the sending station. This difficulty, which has caused many sea disasters, is greatly reduced by the new 'distance-finding' signals, which really are 'distance-telling' signals. "Two signals are sent simultaneously—a radio beacon signal and another by sound. The mariner notes the time that elapses between arrival of the radio signal, which comes in first and reception of the sound signal. By calculations based on this lapse of time, he can determine how many miles he is from the sending station. The signals can be picked up by all ships fitted with radio direction finders or even simple radio broadcast receivers, if they can be tuned to the proper wave length. Sound signals are sent, of course, by the usual fog horn or siren.

First Use of Signals. "This method of distance-telling was first tried out by the United States lighthouse service in 1929 at Cape Henry lighthouse, Virginia and Poe Reef lighthouse in the upper end of Lake Huron. "The following year seven additional stations were placed in operation on the Great Lakes, where mariners already were making frequent use of radio-beacon signals for calculating their positions. The use of distance-telling facilities was but another step. In 1931 ten more stations were given the new equipment, including two on the Pacific coast: the Blunts Reef lighthouse, California, and Grays Harbor light house, Washington.

"Blunts Reef lighthouse lies a short way off Cape Mendocino, a promontory which must be rounded by all ships bound up or down the coast. Because of reefs extending seaward from the cape, ships must keep well offshore. Calculation of distance was formerly difficult when fog obscured everything. With the new signals, mariners can compute accurately their distance from the lighthouse and reefs, and avoid steering too close to shore. "At Grays Harbor lighthouse, Washington, vessels entering the bay from the open Pacific must pass through a 'narrow entrance' formed by two jetties. When fog conceals the shore, ships seeking the entrance are in danger of running aground. The new signals, sent from the lighthouse close to the jetties, will enable ships to approach them with greater safety.

"In 1935, nineteen lighthouses and lightships were given the new distance-telling equipment in addition to those already in operation. By the end of 1936 at least 27 other stations will be so equipped, bringing the total to 73."

Storing Soy Beans. (Ohio Farmer) Illinois, Iowa, Michigan and North Carolina are the big soy bean states with thirty three and a half million bushels, twice the crop of last year. Since hay generally is plentiful not so many farmers this year cut their soy beans for hay but rather threshed them for the beans. Where soy beans are thoroughly dry there is little danger from heating. Few insects attack them. When stored at 50 degrees seed with high moisture content showed little evidence of loss in viability after a year. High temperature and high moisture content cause storage loss, but little loss need be considered if the beans are dry when threshed—Ohio Farmer. Mrs. H. Williams of 1308 No. 25th Street, reports that she has been ill but is recovering nicely.

The writer of the following column, Miss Naomi Walker of Wise, North Carolina, who is the third prize winner in my contest for letters on original beauty hints, strikes an interesting note. She puts beauty culture on the basis of artistic sculpture. You will be interested in what she says.

In this great world of ours men and women are demanding answers to certain questions. To be beautiful is the challenge that every woman in America must face. Great sculptors are taking rough stone, wood and clay and molding it into something that is beautiful. We, too, can do the same for ourselves with little expense. A painter can easily possess that "priceless pearl" called beauty as well as a millionaire.

Every lady who desires to be beautiful should try controlling her voice. Try talking before a mirror or board and notice the sound of the voice. If it is harsh, change the tone because no lady is beautiful who is hoarse. Cultured, refined manners always add to the charm and beauty of a lady. We always consider the face, neck, nails, and hands first. Too many ladies sit before a mirror and spend hours daily preparing those things unbecomingly. The best way to acquire that lasting beauty is by selecting the creams, powders, lotions and perfumes that blend with your complexion. It is useless to recommend any particular preparation because the one I recommend might not suit every case. Therefore you must first study the Fertilization of Fish Eggs. The first record of artificial fertilization of fish eggs is of the practices of an Austrian monk, Don Pincen, who practiced methods of hatching trout. Artificial fertilization was well covered by Lieut. G. L. Jacobell in 1732. Fish farms were then established in Germany and the fish produced became an important article of commerce.
