"MOON OVER MIAMI"

By Joe Burke and Edgar Leslie

Comic strip panels 1-3 showing dialogue between Burke and Leslie about song titles like "CAROLINA MOON" and "IN A KITCHENETTE".

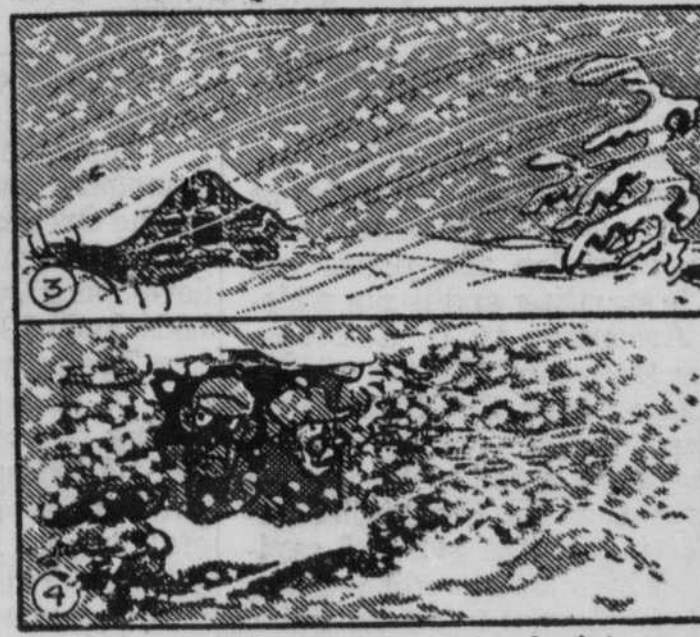

JOE BURKE of Philadelphia and Edgar Leslie, a native New Yorker, wrote many highly successful songs individually and with various collaborators before they formed their present songwriting partnership.

BIRTH OF A SONG

from Author Files By Joseph R. Fliesler and Paul Carruth

Collaboration in their case meant keeping constant communication.

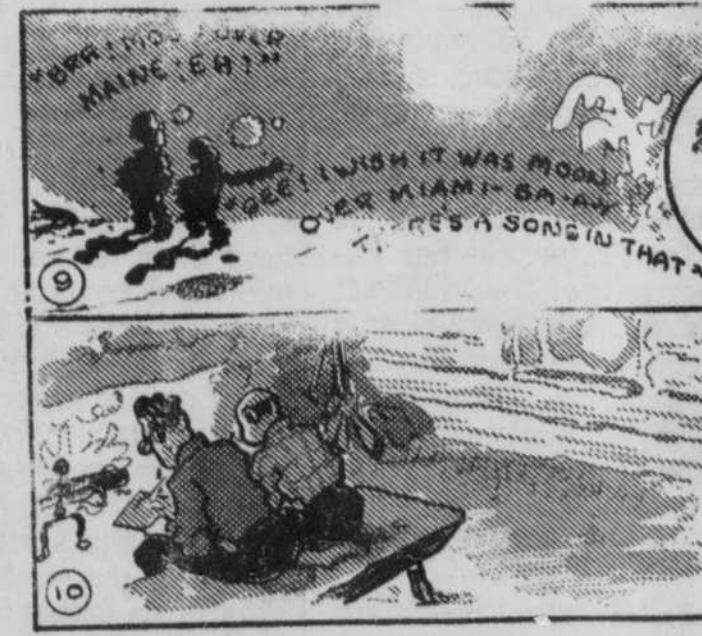

Freelance writers, seeking new settings for their romantic songs, they journeyed to Maine, without rod or reel.

A New England snow storm blanketed their ambitions as well as their cabin.

Their ever-present peril banished all thoughts of song-writing from their minds.

But as soon as the Maine moon came out on a clear night, they became their old selves.

The song became in a sense a wish-fulfillment for them, because in a little while they were looking at the same moon in Burke and Leslie enjoy membership in the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, which protects their copyrighted works against infringement and licenses their use in public performance for profit.
